

Candidates' Stand on Driving Law Should Be Revealed, Says Executive

Voters of Atlanta and Georgia should determine how candidates to the state assembly stand on passage of a drivers' license law before casting their ballots, William J. Cordes, general attorney for the Retail Credit Company, told members of the Junior Chamber of Commerce yesterday in an address on traffic safety.

"Drastic methods are necessary to cure serious cases," Cordes declared. "The records compiled by the United States Department of Commerce and the National Safety Council show that a serious state of affairs confront us in Atlanta and in Georgia in the automobile accident and traffic situation."

Reviews Work Done. Cordes reviewed the work of the Citizens' Safety Committee, organized to co-ordinate the work being done by Atlanta newspapers, the Chamber of Commerce and other organizations sponsoring traffic safety in the city.

"One of our subcommittees demanded the co-operation of city council and better police activity to curb traffic violations," he said. "The result of this can be seen in the redoubled efforts of the police to control traffic violations. The immediate results of this police activity have been fewer accidents and fewer deaths and greatly improved traffic conditions. Captain

Jack Malcom reports only one fatality on the streets of Atlanta for the month of June as compared with nine for the month of May.

"Costa Money, Saves Lives." "Their present drive is costing some people money but it is saving lives."

"Our legislative committee is preparing to submit proposed laws to the legislature, the principal of these being a state drivers' license law."

The speaker described a drivers' license law now in operation in Texas, declaring it had been used to good effect in cutting down accidents, injuries and fatalities throughout the state. Under the Texas law, he reported, the driver is given two coupons with his driver's license.

Three Violations and Out. If the driver commits any serious infraction of driving laws, one of the coupons is detached, filled out and filed with the State Department of Public Safety. Another serious violation and the second coupon goes the way of the first. On the third offense, his license is taken away and subsequent driving by the offender is illegal procurement of a license draws a jail penalty and heavy fine.

"Before voting for the election or re-election of our senators or representatives, you are entitled to know how they stand on the passage of a drivers' license law and other laws necessary to safeguard human life on the highways. Corollary to drivers' license are laws to prevent the fictitious registration of cars and laws requiring the revocation of tags for major traffic violations in certain instances and the revocation of tags on cars used in commission of crime."

FUNDERBURK'S DEATH IS HELD ACCIDENTAL

A verdict of death from a self-inflicted and accidental gunshot wound was returned yesterday by a DeKalb county coroner's jury following an inquest into the death of C. A. Funderburk, of 346 Clifford avenue, N. E.

Funderburk was fatally injured by a shotgun blast Wednesday afternoon in the backyard of his home, a load from a 12-gauge weapon striking him just below the heart. He died while being taken to Grady hospital.

Final rites will be held at 2 o'clock this afternoon at the chapel of Awtry & Lowndes, The Rev. A. T. Couch and W. M. Bishop will officiate, and burial will be in Mountain View cemetery.

3 BIBLE SCHOOLS WILL CLOSE TODAY

Programs To Be Presented By Students as Climax of Study Course.

Exercises marking the close of three vacation Bible schools, sponsored by various religious groups, will be held today.

The school sponsored by six north side churches will be closed formally at exercises to be held at 11 o'clock this morning at the Second Ponce de Leon Baptist church. Songs, recitations and displays of handwork will be presented and a religious dramatization, "The New Vision," will climax the program.

Nearly 200 boys and girls who have attended the Druid Hills Baptist school will be awarded certificates at exercises to be held in the church auditorium at 8 o'clock tonight. The program will consist of flag salutes, memory work and displays of handwork.

Final exercises for students attending the school held by the Atlanta Gospel tabernacle, of the Christian and Missionary Alliance, will be held at the tabernacle at 8 o'clock tonight. All departments of the school will take part in the program.

About 260 students attended the school sponsored by six north side churches, with Dr. A. Lee Hale as director. Churches holding the school were the Cavalry Baptist, Cathedral of St. Philip, Covenant Presbyterian, Peachtree Road Methodist, Peachtree Road Presbyterian and the Second Ponce de Leon Baptist.

A. A. MITCHELL RITES WILL BE HELD TODAY

Final rites for A. A. Mitchell, 59, of Sandy Springs, veteran Fulton county employee, who died Wednesday, will be held at 11 o'clock this morning at the Sandy Springs Methodist church.

The Revs. W. F. Burdette, S. A. F. Wagner and Jack Penn will officiate, and burial will be in the churchyard, under direction of Harry G. Poole.

Mitchell was a member of a pioneer family, and served for 22 years as deputy warden of the colored women's prison camp. For the past nine years he was foreman in the city public works department.

MAYOR, HAILEY CLASH OVER FINANCE REPORT

Key Refers to 'Phantom' Resolution in Brief Comment in Office.

Mayor Key and Provisional Mayor Pro Tem, I. Grier Hailey yesterday engaged in a lively but short-lived clash over Hailey's action in ruling out of order a finance committee report based on what Councilman J. Allen Couch had declared to be a "phantom resolution."

Hailey sustained a point of order raised by Mayor Pro Tem, Ellis B. Barrett at the June 15 meeting of council that finance committee recommendations that $32,000 be distributed to various city departments conflicted with a previous council resolution that any new monies should be diverted to reinstate salary cuts for municipal employees.

After a painstaking investigation and a search of council records, Couch announced that no such resolution was ever passed.

Clash in Office. Hailey, who was presiding at the time the finance committee report was filed, yesterday entered Key's office.

"Good morning, boss," Hailey said. "I see where you ruled a report of the finance committee out of order on the basis of a phantom resolution," Key said, frowning.

"Well, 29 others thought council passed it," Hailey countered.

"Why didn't you demand the resolution?" Key pursued.

"Why didn't some of the others demand it?" Hailey responded.

Councilman Aubrey Milam, finance committee chairman, yesterday stuck to his contention that it is up to opponents of the finance committee report to make the next move, and that if the report is again presented to council, they must initiate it.

Acted in Good Faith. "We carried that report to council in good faith, believing we were doing what was best for the city and its citizens," Milam said.

Hailey saw fit to sidetrack it, and so far as I am concerned it can stay on the siding," he do not propose to call any meeting of the finance committee, and I do not propose to present it again unless asked to do so."

Hailey contended that Couch had attacked him in saying the ruling was an error because no resolution pledging city funds to employees had been passed and issued the following statement:

"It is rather amusing to note the diligence and avidity of Councilman Couch in checking the clerk's records ten days later to determine whether or not his suspicions were well founded as to the non-existence of a resolution by council making it mandatory that any new monies anticipated go to the salary account of the city."

Should Be "We." "In criticizing the ruling of the chair, Mr. Couch seems to forget that he himself voted to sustain the ruling of the chair along with 29 out of 38 members of council; therefore it behooves him to say in the newspapers that 'we' erred instead of saying that the chairman erred. I have no apology to make in my ruling, doing so in absolute sincerity, believing the much-discussed resolution that was invoked to be active this year the same as the last two years, and am still of the opinion I have always held, that if there is additional revenue or new money as it is called, over and above that absolutely needed to give service to taxpayers, we are morally obligated to say the least, to restore the pay cuts of city employees and if any man who wants to be fair to his fellow man will survey the present economic field, he will realize that the public servants should have a square deal and I am sure that the general public of Atlanta would have it so—possibly excepting a few selfish ones—but the world has had a few of those since time immemorial."

"In conclusion let me say, I'm sure Councilman Couch would be the last person in council to criticize a brother for making a mistake."

TVA FOSTERS HATE OF UTILITIES-GUILD

Tennessee Official Says
Without Taxes He Could Beat TVA Price.

WASHINGTON, June 25.—(AP)—J. C. Guild, Jr., president of the Tennessee Electric Power Company, today said the Tennessee Valley Authority was engaged in "a program of ruthless warfare and destruction . . . against the private power industry in the valley."

FINDS ALL-BRAN BETTER THAN PILLS, SALTS, AND OILS

This Natural Food Relieved
His Constipation*

We quote from his letter: "... So I decided to make a fair trial (of Kellogg's ALL-BRAN), with the result that I felt much improved. I have quit all laxatives since 1929.

"For 34 years, I had to take pills, salts, oils, teas, or other fluids, which did more harm than good. ALL-BRAN now is our breakfast cereal for the whole family."

Mr. Martin Wroblewski, 201 Church Street, Highland Park, Mich.

Meals low in "bulk" often lead to constipation. Kellogg's ALL-BRAN provides generous "bulk" in effective form. This "bulk" absorbs moisture, forms a soft mass, and gently exercises and cleanses the system. ALL-BRAN also furnishes vitamin B and iron.

Two tablespoonfuls daily are usually sufficient. How much better to use this natural food in place of patent medicines.

Use as a cereal with milk or cream, or in cooking. ALL-BRAN is much more effective than part-bran products. It is sold by all grocers. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

*Constipation due to insufficient "bulk" in meals.

ties there, Guild blamed "the threat of TVA" for low sale prices on the stocks and bonds of his company.

"The TVA for three long years has carried on uninterruptedly a systematic and all-inclusive program of propaganda designed to engender in the minds of the people of the valley and in the minds of the utilities' own customers, employees and stockholders, a spirit of distrust, dissatisfaction and hatred for private enterprise in the power industry," Guild wrote.

Arguing that TVA forced cities buying its wholesale power to charge low "yardstick" rates, Guild contended that:

"If the Tennessee Electric Power Company could be relieved of all state and local taxes and if all of this savings were passed on to the domestic customers, the resulting domestic rate would be 25 per cent to 30 per cent less than the rate paid by the domestic customers of the municipalities which the TVA serves."

"When one contemplates the purpose behind the TVA, when one sees what it has already done to the credit and securities of the utilities of the southeast, and when one visualizes what the future holds in store for these utilities, if this socialization of the electric utilities continues," he concluded, "one is justified in being very skeptical of Mr. Lillenthal's consideration for the private utilities."

DEAL COMPLETED Atlantic Realty Operates 50 Apartment Houses.

Announcement was made yesterday by Reginald S. Fleet, president, that the Atlantic Realty Company had completed the deal announced in March, whereby that company has taken over and today begins operation of the chain of 50 apartment buildings in this city with 605 units.

It was also announced that W. Stuart Witham has been made vice president and general manager of the company and will have active charge of its property, while the Adair Realty and Loan Company has been appointed renting agents and will take charge of this feature at once.

When the announcement of this large real estate deal was made in March it was stated that Modern Homes, Inc., was taking over the property. Since then it has been taken over by the Atlantic Realty Company.

FEARS ARROGANCE Talmadge Raps Barkley and Robinson Utterances.

Democratic convention utterances of Senator Alben W. Barkley and Senator Joe T. Robinson drew from Governor Talmadge yesterday the comment:

"I hate to see my party behaving that way.

"The supreme court, un intimidated and unafraid, is the bulwark of freedom of any country.

"I hope that four billion, eight hundred million dollars in making our boys arrogant up there."

The Georgia executive forecast Wednesday that President Roosevelt would be defeated and the "solid south" broken by New Deal "violation of the principle of state rights."

GAS TAX GAINS $100,000 Increase Reported Over June of 1935.

Gasoline tax collections for the month ending June 25 took a jump of nearly $100,000 over the same month of last year with a total of $1,426,533.97, according to an announcement yesterday by Comptroller General Homer C. Parker.

Collections during the past month also exceeded those of the previous month, which totaled $1,401,935.35.

A 1-cent-a-gallon tax on kerosene accounted for collections of $16,904 for June as compared with $18,428 for May and $16,962 for June, 1935.

The kerosene tax collection is applied to the public school fund, while 4 of the 6-cent gasoline tax is allocated to the highway department, 1 cent to the schools and 1 cent to counties for road purposes.

GIRLS' SCREAMS ROUT TWO ARMED BANDITS

Two negro bandits fired several shots from their revolvers and fled when screams from Miss Louise Padgett, of 345 Fifth street, N. E., thwarted an attempted holdup at 12:15 o'clock yesterday morning at Piedmont avenue, near North avenue.

Padgett was walking with her escort, Ben C. Walters, of 163 North avenue, N. E., when the two armed negroes approached them. Miss Padgett threw her purse on a nearby embankment and screamed. The negroes fired several shots in the general direction of the couple and fled. The purse was later recovered.

MY COOKERY

By MISS RUTH CHAMBERS.

You may lose the road map, or mislay the can opener. You may forget to bring napkins, or you may spill the salt. But there is one thing that never gets lost at a picnic—your appetite! Even if you don't bring one with you, somehow you pick up a very good one along the way. It is one thing which seems to materialize out of thin air—the kind of fresh, exhilarating air which first tempted you to go picnicking.

Therefore it is a good plan never to underestimate the food capacity of an outdoor party. Whether you take your supply ready prepared, or whether you plan to cook some of your food over a campfire, it is always best to tuck in a few extra sandwiches or little link sausages or whatever else can be counted on to stay ravenous appetites.

"Eats" Are What Count!
There are picnic kits consisting of paper dishes, table covering, napkins, all in gay colors and amusingly decorated, to give outdoor eating a convenience and a style it formerly lacked. And there are clever little gadgets to make outdoor cooking less difficult for the amateur. But, next to the gay spirit of the picnicers, it's the "eats" which count.

If the group is made up of children, or if there will be many more interesting things to do than cook, perhaps the picnic hamper in which everything is ready to serve is the best method of providing the feast.

Sandwiches are the good old standby on this kind of a picnic. Along with the thermos bottle filled with lemonade or orange juice or coffee or milk, and the hard cooked eggs, the fruit and cookies or carefully wrapped cake, see that there is a big space for piles of sandwiches, each in its covering of waxed paper.

Here are suggestions for sandwich fillings which perhaps you have not tried:

Minced Tongue and Horseradish.
Put cold boiled tongue through the food chopper. Mix with enough grated horseradish to season. Use as a filling between slices of rye bread.

Roast Beef Sandwich Spread.
Chop rare roast beef very fine, using only the lean portions of meat. Sprinkle with salt, pepper and a salt spoon of horseradish. Mix and spread on Graham bread.

Bacon and Egg Sandwich Spread.
Put 3 hard-cooked eggs and 1-4 pound crisp fried bacon and 1 small onion through the food chopper. Moistened with mayonnaise.

Meat Loaf Sandwich.
Thin slices of meat loaf make a tasty sandwich spread. And, for that "extra" supply we mentioned above, why not take the meat loaf, carefully wrapped, to the picnic, with a loaf of bread, and make the sandwiches as needed? Here is a recipe for meat loaf:

Two pounds chopped beef, 1 cup finely chopped suet, 2 small onions, minced; 2 cups bread crumbs, 2 eggs, slightly beaten; 2 teaspoons salt, 2 tablespoons Worcestershire sauce, 4 tablespoons horseradish, 1 teaspoon dry mustard, 1-2 green pepper, minced. Mix all ingredients thoroughly. Pack in a buttered loaf pan. Cover top with 3-4 cup tomato catsup. Bake one hour in a moderately hot oven.

Ham Salad de Luxe.
Another suggestion for an addition to the picnic hamper is a hearty salad. Two cups chopped ham, 1-2 cups diced celery, 1-2 cup cream, 2 hard-cooked eggs, 1 teaspoon prepared mustard, 2 tablespoons grated horseradish, 3 tablespoons mayonnaise, cayenne, paprika.

Beat cream until stiff. Add mustard, salt and a dash of cayenne. Beat in the mayonnaise, then fold in the

B. H. HUGHIE SUCCUMBS WHILE DRIVING AUTO

Heart Attack Fatal to Official of Ice and Coal Company Here.

Seized with an attack while driving his car on Lee street at 5 o'clock yesterday morning, Benjamin H. Hughie, 52, of 722 Lawton street, S. W., delivery manager of the Atlantic Ice and Coal Company, died a few moments after his car went out of control and struck a telephone pole near the intersection of Gordon street.

Patrolman P. T. Roberts, who was on the scene at the time, reported the car had almost stopped before it struck the pole. Isaac Lowe, a negro riding with Mr. Hughie, jumped from the machine and kicked the front wheels, preventing the car from crashing into the plate glass window of a lunch room near the corner. The car then swerved to the opposite side of the street and struck the pole, according to Officer Roberts.

The patrolman said he went over to the car and shook Mr. Hughie, who drew several breaths and then appeared to stop breathing. He was placed in a police radio car operated by Patrolmen H. D. Henshaw and J. H. Langley and taken to Grady hospital, where he was pronounced dead on arrival.

Mr. Hughie evidently died of a heart

HOWELL REFUSES AID IN FULTON PRIMARY

County Has Ample Funds to Hold Contests, Says Committee Head.

Hugh Howell, chairman of the state democratic executive committee, yesterday flatly refused to accede to demands of the Fulton county democratic primary committee that $2,500 be supplied the committee to hold the September 9 state primary.

He characterized the demand as not being "practical, possible or necessary" and asserted that the Fulton county committee has ample funds to conduct the primary.

Under a resolution of the local committee, the body will meet again at noon, July 2, to receive the formal answer of the state committee to its demands and there take such action as it deems.

Entrance fees for filling the three legislative posts in Fulton county are the only fees which accrue to the local committee under action of the state group. This fee has been set at $125 each.

Text of Howell's statement follows: "With all the fees the Fulton county democratic committee will get, it will be abundantly provided with funds for use in the coming primary. "The only committee in Georgia complaining is the Fulton county democratic committee.

"The state committee fixed general and uniform fees for candidates for judge and solicitor general. For years the Fulton county democratic committee has charged a man $500 to run for judge or solicitor general in Atlanta.

"The state committee is trying to bring fees for all candidates down to a point where any person may announce and solicit general fee for running. It does not believe that a candidate for the office of judge or solicitor general should pay a fee of $500 to run for office."

'Good Samaritan' Act 'Backfires' on Police

Radio Patrolmen H. D. Henshaw and J. H. Langley are dubious about the policy of playing good Samaritan after their experience yesterday morning.

Cruising on Pryor street near Ridge avenue at 2 o'clock yesterday morning they noticed a man lying on the sidewalk.

"That fellow must be hurt," one of the officers said to the other as they got out of the radio car.

After a bit of shaking, the "injured" man showed them. He threw a heavy rock at Patrolman Langley's head. Patrolman Langley dodged and administered a stiff slap in the face. The man retaliated by throwing another rock at Patrolman Henshaw. Henshaw was a bit slow in ducking and received a gash in the forehead.

After 10 minutes of scuffling the man became more tractable and a visit was made to Grady hospital, where six stitches were taken in Henshaw's head and the prisoner was treated for minor cuts and bruises.

In recorder's court yesterday afternoon the defendant, listed as B. F. Steger, 42, of Zebulon, Ga., was fined $52 on charges of drunk and disorderly conduct and assault and battery.

CONVENTION BREAKS ATTENDANCE RECORDS

Dealers enthusiastically, seemingly absorbing some of their all-abiding faith in the re-election of Mr. Roosevelt and accepting it no less cheerfully.

Perhaps it may be due in part to the fact that a national party convention has not met here for a half-century or more. More likely much of the local responsiveness is attributable to the superb showmanship of National Chairman James A. Farley and his associates in providing an elaborate entertainment program to relieve the tedium of the thinly-spaced business sessions, purposely extended to cover five days in order to give the city opportunity to break even on its liberal contribution to the democratic campaign chest.

But beneath the surface observers profess to see a more compelling cause revolving around the acknowledged popularity of the New Deal President and the deep, unvoiced interest by the public in his future fortunes.

All of this will be brought out more clearly when Mr. Roosevelt himself comes to Philadelphia Saturday in keeping with the precedent he established at Chicago "four long years" ago to personally accept the nomination of his party.

If the past three days may be taken as a guide, a mighty crescendo of public interest will arise to greet him on that occasion, thus officially launching the democratic campaign in what many believe will be the most extensive political setting in American history.

Typical of the local interest in the convention's deliberations, visitors have been amused at the crowds which continue to gather in front of the Bellevue-Stratford hotel, headquarters of the party big-wigs.

From the beginning several hundred persons have congregated on the outside of the hotel daily, leaving only a small channel for pedestrian traffic. They are there merely for a sight of some of the Roosevelt administration notables as they enter and depart, showing something of the keen curiosity and interest in the principals of the governmental and political drama which has been enacted at Washington for the past "four long years."

And unless one reads their faces wrong, it will be four more long years before republican hopes of recapturing the White House again are rejuvenated.

Text of Democratic Platform Adopted at Philadelphia

CONVENTION HALL, PHILADELPHIA, June 25.—(AP)—The text of the democratic platform follows:

We hold this truth to be self-evident—that the test of a representative government is its ability to promote the safety and happiness of the people.

We hold this truth to be self-evident—that 12 years of republican leadership left our nation sorely stricken in body, mind and spirit; and that three years of democratic leadership have put it back on the road to restored health and prosperity.

We hold this truth to be self-evident—that 12 years of republican surrender to the dictatorship of a privileged few have been supplanted by a democratic leadership which has returned the people themselves to the places of authority, and has revived in them new faith and restored the hope which they had almost lost.

We hold this truth to be self-evident—that this three-year recovery in all the basic values of life and the re-establishment of the American way of living has been brought about by humanizing the policies of the federal government as they affect the personal, financial, industrial and agricultural well-being of the American people.

We hold this truth to be self-evident—that government in a modern civilization has certain inescapable obligations to its citizens, among which are:

(1) Protection of the family and the home.
(2) Establishment of a democracy of opportunity for all the people.
(3) Aid to those overtaken by disaster.

These obligations, neglected through 12 years of the old leadership, have once more been recognized by American government. Under the new leadership they will never be neglected.

FOR THE PROTECTION OF THE FAMILY AND THE HOME.

(1) We have begun and shall continue the successful drive to rid our land of kidnappers and bandits. We shall continue to use the powers of government to end the activities of the malefactors of great wealth who defraud and exploit the people.

SAVINGS AND INVESTMENT.

(2) We have safeguarded the thrift of our citizens by restraining those who would gamble with other people's savings, by requiring truth in the sale of securities; by putting the brakes upon the use of credit for speculation; by outlawing the manipulation of prices in stock and commodity markets; by curbing the overreaching power and unwholesome practices of utility holding companies; by insuring fifty million bank accounts.

OLD-AGE AND SOCIAL SECURITY.

(3) We have built foundations for the security of those who are faced with the hazards of unemployment and old age; for the orphaned, the crippled and the blind. On the foundation of the Social Security Act we are determined to erect a structure of economic security for all our people, making sure that this benefit shall keep step with the ever-increasing capacity of America to provide a high standard of living for all its citizens.

CONSUMER.

(4) We will act to secure to the consumer fair value, honest sales and a decreased spread between the price he pays and the price the producer receives.

RURAL ELECTRIFICATION.

(5) This administration has fostered power rate yardsticks in the Tennessee valley and in several other parts of the nation. As a result electricity has been made available to the people at a lower rate. We will continue to promote plans for rural electrification and for cheap power by means of the yardstick method.

HOUSING.

(6) We maintain that our people are entitled to decent, adequate housing at a price which they can afford. In the last three years the federal government, having saved more than two million homes from foreclosure, has taken the first steps in our history to provide decent housing for people of meager incomes. We believe every encouragement should be given to the building of new homes by private enterprise; and that the government should steadily extend its housing program toward the goal of adequate housing for those forced through economic necessities to live in unhealthy and slum conditions.

VETERANS.

(7) We shall continue just treatment to our war veterans and their dependents.

FOR THE ESTABLISHMENT OF A DEMOCRACY OF OPPORTUNITY.

AGRICULTURE.

We have taken the farmers off the road to ruin. We have kept our pledge to agriculture to use all available means to raise farm income toward its prewar purchasing power. The farmer is no longer suffering from 15-cent corn, 3-cent hogs, 2-1-2 cent beef at the farm, 5-cent wool, 30-cent wheat, 5-cent cotton and 3-cent sugar.

By rational legislation we have reduced the farmers' indebtedness and doubled his net income. In co-operation with the states and through the farmers' own committees we are restoring the fertility of his land and checking the erosion of his soil. We are bringing electricity and good roads to his home.

We will continue to improve the soil conservation and domestic allotment program with payments to farmers.

We will continue a fair-minded administration of agricultural laws, quick to recognize and meet new problems and conditions. We recognize the gravity of the evils of farm tenancy, and we pledge the full co-operation of the government in the refinancing of farm indebtedness at the lowest possible rates of interest and over a long term of years.

We favor the production of all the market will absorb, both at home and abroad, plus a reserve supply sufficient to insure fair prices to consumers; we favor judicious commodity loans on seasonal surpluses; and we favor assistance within federal authority to enable farmers to adjust and balance production with demand, at a fair profit to the farmers.

We favor encouragement of sound, practical farm co-operatives. By the purchase and retirement of ten million acres of submarginal land, and assistance to those attempting to eke out an existence upon it, we have made a good beginning toward proper land use and rural rehabilitation.

The farmer has been returned to the road to freedom and prosperity. We will keep him on that road.

YOUTH.

We have aided youth to stay in school; given them constructive occupation; opened the door to opportunity which 12 years of republican neglect had closed.

Our youth have been returned to the road to freedom and prosperity. We will keep them on that road.

MONOPOLY AND CONCENTRATION OF ECONOMIC POWER.

Monopolies and the concentration of economic power, the creation of republican rule and privilege, continue to be the master of the producer, the exploiter of the consumer, and the enemy of the independent operator. This is a problem challenging the unceasing effort of untrammeled public officials in every branch of the government. We pledge vigorously and fearlessly to enforce the criminal and civil provisions of the existing anti-trust laws, and to the extent that their effectiveness has been weakened by new corporate devices or judicial construction, we propose by law to restore their efficacy in stamping out monopolistic practices and the concentration of economic power.

AID TO THOSE OVERTAKEN BY DISASTER.

We have aided and will continue to aid those who have been visited by widespread drought and floods and have adopted a nationwide flood-control policy.

UNEMPLOYMENT.

We believe that unemployment is a national problem, and that it is an inescapable obligation of our government to meet it in a national way. Due to our stimulation of private business, more than five million people have been re-employed; and we shall continue to maintain that the first objective of a program of economic security is maximum employment in private industry at adequate wages.

Where business fails to supply such employment, we believe that work at prevailing wages should be provided in co-operation with state and local governments on useful public projects, to the end that the national wealth may be increased, the skill and energy of the worker may be utilized, his morale maintained, and the unemployed assured the opportunity to earn the necessities of life.

THE CONSTITUTION.

The republican platform proposes to meet many pressing national problems solely by action of the separate states. We know that drought, dust storms, floods, minimum wages, maximum hours, child labor and working conditions in industry, monopolistic and unfair business practices cannot be adequately handled exclusively by 48 separate state legislatures, 48 separate state administrations and 48 separate state courts. Transactions and activities which inevitably overflow state boundaries call for both state and federal treatment.

We have sought and will continue to seek to meet these problems through legislation within the constitution.

If these problems cannot be effectively solved by legislation within the constitution, we shall seek such clarifying amendment as will assure to the legislatures of the several states and to the congress of the United States, each within its proper jurisdiction, the power to enact those laws which the state and federal legislatures, within their respective spheres, shall find necessary, in order adequately to regulate commerce, protect public health and safety and safeguard economic security. Thus, we propose to maintain the letter and spirit of the constitution.

THE MERIT SYSTEM IN GOVERNMENT.

For the protection of government itself and promotion of its efficiency we pledge the immediate extension of the merit system through the classified civil service, which was first established and fostered under democratic auspices—to all non-policy-making positions in the federal service.

We shall subject to the civil service law all continuing positions which, because of the emergency, have been exempt from its operation.

CIVIL LIBERTIES.

We shall continue to guard the freedom of speech, press, radio, religion and assembly which our constitution guarantees; with equal rights to all and special privileges to none.

GOVERNMENT FINANCE.

The administration has stopped deflation, restored values and enabled business to go ahead with confidence. Income is imperiled. In reviving national income, we have fortified government finance. We have raised the public credit to a position of unsurpassed security. The interest rate on government bonds has been reduced to the lowest point in 28 years. The same government bonds which in 1932 sold under 83 are now selling over 104.

We approve the objective of a permanently sound currency so stabilized as to prevent the former wide fluctuations in value which injured in turn producers, debtors, and property owners on the one hand, and wage earners and creditors on the other, a currency which will permit full utilization of the country's resources. We assert that today we have the soundest currency in the world.

We are determined to reduce the expenses of government. We are being aided therein by the recession in unemployment. As the requirements of relief decline and national income advances, an increasing percentage of federal expenditures can and will be met from current revenues, secured from taxes levied in accordance with ability to pay. Our retrenchment, tax and recovery programs thus reflect our firm determination to achieve a balanced budget and the reduction of the national debt at the earliest possible moment.

FOREIGN POLICY.

In our relationship with other nations, this government will continue to extend the policy of good neighbor. We reaffirm our opposition to war as an instrument of national policy, and declare that disputes between nations should be settled by peaceful means. We shall continue to observe a neutrality in the disputes of others; to be prepared, resolutely to resist aggression against ourselves; to work for peace and to take the profits out of war; to guard against being drawn, by political commitments, international banking or private trading, into any war which may develop anywhere.

We shall continue to foster the increase in our foreign trade which has been achieved by this administration; to seek by mutual agreement the lowering of those tariff barriers, quotas and embargoes which have been raised against our exports of agricultural and industrial products; but continue as in the past to give adequate protection to our farmers and manufacturers against unfair competition or the dumping on our shores of commodities and goods produced abroad by cheap labor or subsidized by foreign governments.

THE ISSUE.

The issue in this election is plain. The American people are called upon to choose between a republican administration that has been aided therein by the recession in unemployment. As the requirements of relief decline and national income advances, an increasing percentage of federal expenditures can and will be met from current revenues, secured from taxes levied in accordance with ability to pay. Our retrenchment, tax and recovery programs thus reflect our firm determination to achieve a balanced budget and the reduction of the national debt at the earliest possible moment.

Dedicated to a government of liberal American principles, we are determined to oppose equally the despotism of communism and the menace of concentrated fascism.

We hold this final truth to be self-evident—that the interests, the security and the happiness of the people of the United States of America can be perpetuated only under democratic government as conceived by the founders of our nation.

DEMOCRATIC PLATFORM IS READILY ADOPTED

gold or silver in the monetary plank, but, instead, dedication to "permanently sound currency so stabilized as to prevent the former wide fluctuations in value." And it asserted the nation has today the soundest currency in the world.

Pledge to Farmers.

The party's declaration for agriculture, which the subcommittee had held to three short paragraphs, came from a special subcommittee tripled in length.

"We have taken the farmers off the road to ruin," was the opening line. "We have kept our pledge," was the general thesis.

The farmer, the plank asserted, is no longer suffering from low prices; his indebtedness has been reduced, his net income doubled. It mentioned soil fertility restored, erosion checked, electricity and good roads brought to the farms and pledged continuation of such efforts along with a fair-minded administration quick to recognize and meet new problems.

There was no crop insurance pledge, such as had been advocated by Secretary Wallace.

It favored production of "all the market will absorb both at home and abroad, plus a reserve supply sufficient to insure fair prices to consumers."

Loans on Surpluses.

It favored also loans on seasonal surpluses and retirement of submarginal lands.

A battle in committee over Townsend old age pension plan, or some variation, did not materialize. The plan was suggested and voted down. Instead, the pledge was made to build foundations for the security of those who are faced with the hazards of unemployment and old age.

This was to be based on the social security act.

To End Sweated Labor.

Plea for a pronouncement in favor of minimum wages for women were answered with the line: "We have undertaken to put an end to the sweated labor of the (the worker's) wife and children."

Collective bargaining was mentioned as something already written into the law. Credit was taken for increasing the worker's own pay and shortening his hours.

Monopolies were called the creation of republican rule and privilege. The committee offered a promise vigorously and fearlessly to enforce anti-trust laws and write new ones as necessary. Advocates of an extended civil service found in the document a pledge to extend the merit system to all non-policy-making positions in the federal service.

Opposed War as Policy.

The platform pledged opposition to war as an instrument of national policy, declaring for peaceful settlement of disputes but also for preparedness "resolutely to resist aggression." There was also a pledge against engaging in alliances couched in the words "guard against being drawn, by political commitments, international banking or private trading, into any war."

It pledged extension of the housing program to just treatment for war veterans and their dependents, new opportunity for youth, drought and flood relief, and guardianship of civil liberties.

VIRGINIA DELEGATE GREET SEN. GLASS

Veteran Solon Attends Democratic Meet Against Doober's Orders.

PHILADELPHIA, June 25.—(AP)—Senator Carter Glass returned today to the democratic national convention to be greeted with a burst of applause from the Virginia delegation of which he is a member.

"Still tired" from recent arduous duties in the senate, the senator returned from Washington where he went to "rest" after the initial session Tuesday.

"I merely returned in my capacity as a delegate at large from Virginia," he said as he took his seat with the Virginia delegation.

Friends said he did not like being called, as he was in some quarters, a "walker" or a "bolter" of the party he has served half a century. When he arrived first, early in the week, he said that he was "too worn out by congressional duties" to serve in his customary place in the platform committee, and that he came to the convention against doctors' orders "because his absence might be misconstrued."

His return, on the day set for the report of the first platform committee on which he has not served in 40 years, was seen by friends of the senator who has differed frequently with

Platform and New Majority Rule Bring Birth of New Party—White

PHILADELPHIA, June 25.—The new party under the old name was born today. Its birth was the veto power from the old south, its new platform gives all reserve power to the President. It is, in essence, and politically, the creature of Hamilton: its Jeffersonian ideal is to establish approximate economic equality even if it must deny to the average man much political liberty. The new party is a baby, its features are not set, but they shine like an augur's prophecy in its countenance—its rules, its platform, its candidates. Three days have been consumed in the accommodation—three days of twilight sleep, painless but dreary.

It is cribbed now. A definitely left party, it is bred of three blood streams: first, the old south, a remote grandmother; second, the new Tammany, an all-American wigwag wherein the Irish rule the urban population, and third, in its blood is a distant strain of farm-labor radicalism: Franklin Roosevelt is its daddy as much as Thomas Jefferson was the father of the Civil War and post-war democracy and as much as Alexander Hamilton begot the republican party as it lived from Lincoln to Hoover.

"Crown Prince" Speak.

One might say that the convention has heard the voice of the two crown princes of the government, Governor George H. Earle and Senator Bennett Champ Clark. Bennett Clark tonight, presenting the report of the committee on rules, showed the convention on a new path, a path of compromise with fine zeal and proper courage. He cut the umbilical cord that bound democracy to its old mother by taking the name of the party, the abrogation of the two-thirds rule, the right to veto a presidential nomination.

The two-thirds rule which passed out of the democratic party this evening when young Bennett Clark and down amid the well-earned plaudits of the multitude, took away the democratic presidential nominations from Speaker Champ Clark in 1912 and William Gibbs McAdoo in 1924, which they won fairly by attaining and holding a majority in democratic national convention, but not a two-thirds majority.

The convention knew that young Clark, cast for the moment as a modern Hamlet, was avenging his father's political death. A fine, manly job he did of it, but with his vengeance came also the death of the party his father loved and the birth of the party which may take the son to the place the father vainly coveted.

White Sees "No Floppy Path."

The new party has no floppy path before it. Franklin Roosevelt may, probably will, be able to hold it together. But the seeds of death are in it. Many of its members are bound to conflict. The city Tammany group of states needs the negro in its business as a voter. To hold him as a voter it must prosper him as a worker and as a citizen. Which is all right for the farmer-labor group in the north.

But when "Cotton Ed" Smith raged to reporters as he did this week at having to sit under the altar of a colored preacher, listening to him invoke God's blessing on white men, and further, when the delegates from the south fully realize that they no longer can hold their party to a policy of white supremacy even in the south without states' rights, trouble will come into the new organization.

Another thing, the city Tammany, Chicago, New York, Houston or Atlanta, inclines naturally toward conservatism, a feudal conservatism. The money to operate every Tammany comes from the rich, whom the Tammany softly assents to control the party. The attitude toward Franklin Roosevelt which the New York Tammany holds, and Al Smith's attitude does not seriously differ from that of his other schemes, is the universal feudal attitude which a new party, willing to riddle the rich but always must furnish some kind of political nap to the poor, through political assassination, must have.

New Deal measures and policies as a "show of his colors."

Jesse Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Corporation, accompanied Glass on the trip from Washington. Representative Clifton A. Woodrum also returned to the convention city today. He was here as a spectator on the opening day but returned to Washington yesterday "on business."

seemingly of course, but always decent and moderate.

"South's Veto Gone."

The farmer-labor crowd is frankly radical. They would use taxation as a distributive agent more than will please the city democrats or the land owners who operate the feudal system in the south.

This whole new American political tendency is a reversion to feudalism, modern feudalism but typical of all feudalism—at its best a benevolent despotic paternalism. In the new party, the city Tammany rules through conservative feudalism. In the south, the landed aristocrat must maintain feudal relations with his sharecroppers. In the west, the farmer-labor group must set up a feudal relation with an all-wise, all-powerful government. In all three, the citizens surrender their political individualism for economic security. But here is the dismembering dynamite.

Under this set-up, the feudal south will have no reason to cling to the empty name of an extinct Jeffersonian party, for both the farmer-labor group and the Tammany group will be vastly more insistent upon treating the negro as a worker and not a serf and giving him social and political equality in the north and economic equality under the landlord with the average white man.

adopted a call for a reapportionment of the size of all state delegations. To be based on the democratic strength within a state rather than its population, the new convention seating would go into effect at the 1944 convention.

Second, again by a voice vote marked by a few "noes," the convention adopted the platform completed only a hour or so before, and hastily mimeographed.

The platform was adopted on a voice vote. There was a few "noes," but they were disregarded by the permanent chairman, Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, who pronounced acceptance unanimous.

In booming tone Senator Wagner, of New York, chairman of the resolutions committee read the platform. It called for "sound currency to stabilize as to prevent the former wide fluctuations in value."

On relief, as on many other points, the platform referred directly to and took issue with the republican declaration of principles adopted in Cleveland.

Issue Is Two Platforms.

"The issue in this election is plain," the platform concluded, "the American people are called upon to choose between a republican administration that has and would again regiment them in the service of privileged groups and a democratic administration dedicated to the establishment of equal economic opportunity for all our people."

Senator Clark, of Missouri, chairman of the committee, called the resolution a harbinger of harmony and democratic success.

By its action the rules committee sought to satisfy a bloc of southern states fearful of losing their voice in naming presidential candidates.

No Minority Report.

Representative Cox, of Georgia, and Beaman Strong, of Texas, who carried the brunt of the fight for Dixie, said they had abandoned plans to present a minority report against scrapping the two-thirds rule and carrying their fight to the floor.

After the rule, which has governed nominations since 1832, was abrogated, the compromise was worked out by a subcommittee of seven along lines suggested by Senator Clark, Senator Millard Tydings, of Maryland; W. W. Hastings, of Oklahoma, and Howard Bruce, Maryland national committeeman.

While the subcommittee labored over

Georgia Labor Leaders at Democratic Convention

anted at least six votes.

Herman Bennett, of West Virginia, asked for reapportionment on the basis of democratic voting strength with an additional vote for every 30,000 democratic votes cast in excess of the republican vote as "merit badges for faithful states."

The vote on the rules was followed immediately by presentation of the Roosevelt platform. Broadly it hinted at a possible future change of the constitution, although making no specific recommendation for any immediate amendment. "It was read to the convention by the resolutions committee chairman, Senator Wagner, of New York."

The convention officers put across abrogation of the two-thirds rule without a roll call. On a voice vote, the first chorus of "ayes" was weak. The "noes," apparently arising mostly from among the Texas delegates, was almost as loud.

Chairman Robinson called again, and this time the "ayes" were loud enough for him to announce in stentorian voice: "The eyes have it."

Senator Clark, of Missouri, first made a plea for the rules change before the vote. At one point, he said: "Whatever merit there may have been in the two-thirds rule vanished with the Civil War. It should have been abolished with slavery."

Court Not Infallible.

Difficulties over the section dealing with the constitution provided weary platform drafters most of their difficulty.

Senator Walsh, of Massachusetts, speaking as acting chairman of the resolutions committee, described this section as advancing the view that the supreme court was not infallible.

The relief plank called for continued administration by the federal government, Walsh said, as contrasted with the republican call for returning it to the states. He added the civil service plank was a strong one, blanketing all those except policy-making officials. A last-minute expansion of the farm plank, he explained, was responsible for some of the delay in completing committee approval.

Outside, meanwhile, the Quaker city streets became the scene of continuing festivity. The parade of the Philadelphia "Mummers," a Mardi Gras and the choosing of a convention "queen" were among other things on the elaborate program.

Inside the 15,000-seat auditorium, the delegates and galleries filed with the usual tardiness to their seats.

Philadelphia's parade of the Mummers, however, waiting for them to be thrown open again. They were, after a time, and the vast hall was virtually filled when Chairman Robinson rapped for order at 7:55 p. m., Atlanta time.

All stood for the invocation by the Rev. Ernest G. Richardson, bishop of the Methodist Episcopal church, Philadelphia.

A prospect that the actual ballot renominating President Roosevelt would be taken tomorrow night, instead of at the afternoon session, developed with announcement from the rostrum that there would be nine sessions of the convention, in all. Tonight's was the sixth.

To Split Session.

Under the latest plan the nominating speech and some of the many second speeches will be delivered tomorrow afternoon, and the voting postponed until night. Vice President Garner will be renominated Saturday afternoon.

The evening's oratorical festivities were started by a Texas. While his colleagues waved aloft their now-scarred sombreros, a flowery invitation to the Texas centennial celebration was extended from the rostrum by George Waverly Briggs, of Dallas.

Then the "Young Democratic Club" had their inning. Their spokesman was Frank Wickham, of Sioux Falls, S. D., who predicted that 75 per cent of his generation would stand by the New Deal. His co-makers on the floor grabbed up a batch of state standards, to which they affixed "Young Democrat" placards, and started a parade.

The rumbling pipe organ helped out the shouting youngsters, who kept their celebration going for minutes.

Al Smith Outbreak.

During this outbreak John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, who declared for the democratic ticket months ago, came almost unrecognized into a box far back on the stage and sat down to chat with party leaders. He posed for a picture with James A. Farley.

Just as the parade of the Young Democrats was subsiding, a small group high in a side gallery brought out four large black-and-white signs reading "We want Al Smith."

The gallery demonstrators soon became the focus of all attention. Then amid the excitement the gallery, fists suddenly began to swing. A score or more seemed involved in the melee when the police descended with night sticks and put an end to the disturbance.

A dozen arrests were made. One man, injured, was carried out by nurses. The rest were led away.

When the vast audience realized what was going on, boos and cheers rocked the vast auditorium. But order was restored speedily, and the convention went on with its program as if nothing had happened.

Smith Walks Out Again.

Representative Mitchell, of Illinois, the only negro in congress, was recognized by Robinson. In turn, he shouted a pean of praise for the New Deal, and what it had done for members of his race.

Amid considerable confusion on the floor Senator Smith, of South Carolina, again walked out on the convention as Mitchell spoke, but he came back when Mitchell concluded his speech. Several of his colleagues in the South Carolina delegation accompanied him on the walkout and the walk-in again.

It was Smith who bolted temporarily yesterday because of a prayer by a negro minister. He holds that negroes have no place in democratic conventions.

Bennett Clark, of the rules committee, read his report recommending abandonment of the celebrated two-thirds nominating rule.

Clark prefaced his remarks with a reference to the incident which had just occurred in the gallery.

"The demonstration a few moments ago by a few interlopers in behalf of Alfred E. Smith," he said, "in contrast to this magnificent audience of democrats of the United States, affords accurate comparison of Alfred E. Smith and the Liberty League on the one hand, and the democratic party on the other."

Delegates and galleries cheered this. Then Clark made a brief speech explaining what the rules committee had done.

Text of Resolution Changing 2-3 Rule

PHILADELPHIA, June 25.—(AP) The text of the report submitted to the Democratic national convention tonight by Senator Clark, of Missouri, chairman of the committee recommending abrogation of the historic two-thirds rule.

By the unanimous direction of the committee on rules and order of business, I desire to submit the following report of that committee to the convention:

Your committee on rules and order of business unanimously submits to the convention the following report and recommends its adoption:

"Resolved, that the rule of the last Democratic national convention, including the rules of the house of representatives of the 74th congress, as far as applicable, shall be the rules of this convention, with the following exception, to wit:

"That all questions, including the question of nomination of candidates for president of the United States and vice president of the United States, shall be determined by a majority vote of the delegates to the convention, and the rule heretofore existing in democratic conventions requiring a two-thirds vote in such cases is hereby specifically abrogated."

"Be it resolved, that all nominating speeches presenting candidates for the nomination of president and vice president will not exceed 20 minutes, and the second speeches shall not exceed five minutes."

"Be it resolved, that no delegate shall occupy the floor in debate for more than 30 minutes, except with the unanimous consent of the convention."

The order of business which your committee recommends is as follows:

1. Report of committee on credentials.

2. Report of committee on permanent organization.

3. Report of the committee on rules.

4. Report of the committee on resolutions.

5. Nomination and selection of a candidate for president of the United States.

6. Nomination and selection of a candidate for vice president of the United States.

7. Confirmation of the selection of the members of the democratic national committee.

8. Such miscellaneous business as may be in order.

9. Adjournment of the convention.

In addition your committee unanimously recommended the adoption of the following resolution:

"Be it resolved, that the democratic national committee is hereby instructed to formulate and to recommend to the next national convention a plan for improving the system by which delegates and alternates to democratic national conventions are apportioned."

And he further resolved, that in formulating this plan, the national committee shall take into account the democratic strength within each state, District of Columbia and territories, etc., in making said apportionment."

W. T. ANDERSON URGES CONSERVATIVE PLANKS

Editor Says Party Should Eschew Experiments for Consolidations.

By GLENN RAMSEY, Associated Press Staff Writer. PHILADELPHIA, June 25.—(AP)—W. T. Anderson, editor of the Macon (Ga.) Telegraph, advocated the adoption of a "conservative platform" today by the Democratic national convention.

Anderson, while not a delegate to the convention, is a party man and has attended assemblies of the national party for 16 years.

"The leadership of Mr. Roosevelt is fine," Anderson said, "but I believe we have had enough of new things and should stop and consolidate the party's position."

"Congress needs to take back its powers and stand on its own feet," he said. "Mr. Roosevelt is a strong leader and we need him, but congress should take the measures he advocates and study them, then decide what is best to be done and do it."

The Georgia editor said he thought the republicans "did a smart thing" by putting some of the administration's policies in their platform, which "was all the more reason" for the democratic party to become "more conservative" this year.

FDIC Praised.

Thomas J. Hamilton, editor of the Augusta Chronicle and a delegate, said if Roosevelt and the party had "done nothing else" than to make the nation's banking structure safe he deserves re-election.

"The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation act, passed over the protest of the powerful banking and financial interests of this country," Hamilton said, "makes the bank in Sylva, Ga. and the party in every way as it does in New York city in the custody of J. P. Morgan & Company and the National City Bank."

The candidate of the republican party for the FDIC in every way possible in Kansas and the presumption is he wants Kansas money deposited in New York.

Of course the (republican) platform based on past performances must not be taken too seriously. Whoever heard of the republicans being sincerely interested in the welfare of the farmers or the working people of this country?

"Smith No Worry."

A diligent search has failed to locate a democrat disposed to worry over the ostentatious departure of Al Smith and his "four walking companions from the political household of their fathers," H. T. McIntosh, editor of the Albany Herald, said.

McIntosh's delegation member, is an outstanding supporter of President Roosevelt and the New Deal.

"Worried democrats may be hiding behind locked doors," McIntosh continued, "but they are nowhere in the open."

"How can we lose with Roosevelt and his record of accomplishment?" he asked one delegate of a couple of others. And the two replied in one voice, "We can't."

"It is not assumed confidence either but the real thing, and it is so all over the country," among democrats that Chairman Farley saw fit to sound a warning, to which probably nobody paid the slightest attention."

Leavy Added.

C. H. Leavy, editor of the Brunswick News and a delegate, said he believed Roosevelt would defeat Governor Landon "decidedly and he ought to."

Leavy added: "It seems to me that the straight issue in the presidential campaign is whether to return to the old Hoover administration or stick to President Roosevelt."

ILLEGALLY TRANSPORTED.

RICHMOND, Va., June 25.—(AP)—Federal agents illegally transported Earl Conner Williams, negro charged with the murder of Miss Fannie Kurz, from Henrico county jail at night to the scene of the crime at Fredericksburg, United District Judge Luther B. Way declared tonight in excluding testimony as to what the defendant said at the time.

NEW DEAL'S CASE STATED

The address of Permanent Chairman Robinson before the Philadelphia convention makes spirited reply to republican criticism of New Deal policies, as did Senator Barkley in the keynote address, with the promise that extraordinary governmental spending will be brought to an end as soon as possible without endangering the relief or recovery programs.

Senator Robinson pledges that these expenditures will be reduced as soon and as rapidly as circumstances permit, but emphasizes that "unemployment assistance cannot be abandoned so long as there are large groups of American men and women unable to find an opportunity to earn a livelihood."

He emphasizes this position later in his address when, in commenting upon the plank in the republican platform demanding immediate balancing of the budget, he points out that—

"The Roosevelt administration has balanced the budget, except as to extraordinary expenditures, and the question is whether employment or relief expenditures may be discontinued in order to accomplish what we all desire to be done as speedily as possible, namely, establish complete balance between revenues and government expenses."

Senator Robinson's discussion of the financial policies of the present administration supplements what Senator Barkley had to say on the same subject in his keynote address, in which he revealed that the net increase in the national debt under the New Deal has been but little more than it was during the last three years of the Hoover regime.

In 1929 the national debt was $17,000,000,000, but this figure was increased to $21,000,000,000 in 1933, without the federal government having borne any of the burden of unemployment relief. Under the Roosevelt administration the debt has increased to $31,000,000,000, out of this $10,000,000,000 increase more than $5,000,000,000 is represented in loans advanced by such agencies as the RFC and the HOLC, the great volume of which will in time be returned to the treasury.

The figures presented in the keynote address reveal that the net increase in the national debt is less than the sum expended for direct relief and on work relief projects.

Certainly there can be no sound criticism by the republicans of the increase in the national debt under the New Deal when under the Hoover regime the debt was increased four billions, with the country continuing its descent into the worst depression in its history, while under Roosevelt the net increase has been little more than five billion, while the nation was being brought rapidly back to universal prosperity.

Senator Robinson follows the keynote address closely in his defense of the abandonment of the gold standard and the emphasis he places upon the fact that this step did not create an "unsound currency"; in his defense of criticisms that have been voiced of the decisions of the supreme court in New Deal cases, and in arraignment of the platform and candidates named at the Cleveland convention.

Striking tribute is paid to President Roosevelt when, in replying to the charge of Senator Steiwer at Cleveland that "Roosevelt is a president without conscience," Senator Robinson says:

"President Roosevelt will not possess the kind of a conscience with which republicans are familiar in their conduct of public affairs. He has, however, a conscience which takes note of the distress and helplessness of the feeble and despairing. A conscience keenly alive to the necessity of maintaining the national honor; of promoting national progress by repealing laws that have destroyed it, and by advocating measures designed to advance it."

The address of the permanent chairman is an able supplement to the keynote address of the temporary chairman. Both are powerful, convincing and logical and reflect the militant campaign that the democratic party will wage between now and the November elections.

JOSEPH S. RAINE

Atlanta loses in the death of Joseph S. Raine, secretary of the Southeastern Underwriters' Association, an outstanding figure in the business, civic and social life of the community.

Few Atlanta businessmen were as widely known as Mr. Raine, who gained a position of national importance as a result of his conspicuous service as the head for nearly 30 years of the underwriters' association. As the result of his conscientious attendance upon annual conventions of the National Association of Insurance Agents, and the regard in which he was universally held, he had for many years been affectionately known as the "official host" of these conventions.

Much of the progress accomplished in this section during recent years by insurance interests is attributable to the leadership of Mr. Raine and the ability and earnestness with which he discharged his important duties as secretary of the underwriters' association.

Atlanta's development as the business center of the southeast and the high esteem in which its business leaders are held throughout the country are largely the result of the integrity and devotion to the highest ideals of the men who have been conspicuous leaders in the city's financial, industrial and commercial growth. The city has had no citizen who better exemplified these fine traits than Mr. Raine.

His death will cause sincere regret not only in insurance circles but generally in business and civic circles.

THE ROOSEVELT NOMINATORS

With only two days left in which to complete the roll of 100,000 Roosevelt nominators, intensified effort will be made in every county in the state to exceed the quota set for Georgia democrats.

The opportunity to purchase a $1 ticket to the various gatherings at which the acceptance speech of President Roosevelt will be heard makes it possible for every Georgia democrat to play an inexpensive part in raising the war chest for the national organization of his or her party.

Many counties throughout the state are already "over the top," but some have yet to reach their allotments. There is little doubt that the total of 100,000 tickets will be sold, but no county can afford to be recorded as having failed to sell its allotted quota—and the extent to which the state as a whole exceeds the $100,000 will measure its loyalty to the party and its great leader.

Georgia as the "second home" of Franklin Roosevelt can send to the rest of the country an unmistakable message of its fealty and devotion by materially exceeding the reasonable quota of the fund needed to finance the national campaign.

Fulton county and the fifth district should lead the way in far exceeding the number of tickets assigned to this area.

If you have not bought your ticket, do so today!

MRS. J. W. PAYNE

In the tragic death in an automobile accident of Mrs. J. W. Payne, executive secretary of the Travelers' Aid Society, Atlanta loses a citizen who for more than a quarter of a century had contributed materially to the welfare of the community.

The Travelers' Aid Society of Atlanta was the second such organization to be formed in an American city, the first being in St. Louis. When it was established here in 1900, as the result of undesirable conditions at the old Union Station, and in order that assistance might be given especially to women travelers passing through the city, its staff consisted of only one person.

Under the direction of Mrs. Payne, and of the boards of outstanding citizens which have headed the society, it has developed until it now has a staff of four white persons and two negroes, and has branches or regular visitors at all of the railroad and bus stations in the city, and its scope of service has been materially broadened.

During recent years the society has rendered aid to as high as 20,000 men, women and children annually, those included being not only travelers passing for a few hours in the city, but others who, often because of the interest shown in their welfare, have remained in Atlanta and become valuable citizens.

Mrs. Payne had been the motivating power behind the splendid and far-reaching work of the society. An executive of rare ability and efficiency, she was widely known and respected for her nobility and sweetness of character.

Few Atlantans were as widely known as this quiet and unpretentious woman who devoted a major portion of her life to the assistance of the strangers within our midst, and it is not surprising that the news of her death resulted in the receipt of messages of regret from every section of the country.

Russia's Preparedness

The interview-conversation, published in The Constitution, between Commander Vladimir Burzin, Soviet military attaché at Washington, and Joseph Loewinson, is of absorbing interest from more than one point of view.

In the first place, the interviewer knew what he was asking and showed himself the full equal, intellectually speaking, of the interviewee, which is an important consideration. Commander Burzin was deftly guided to make a pronouncement on one important subject after the other. The dominant theme, however, was Russia's preparedness for war. I think it is a pity that it should be so. Here in Russia, which may mean something to the world in the near future, millions look with keen interest and others with hope, and this new life, too, is wholly dominated again, it seems to me, by the question of war.

It must be admitted that the Russians, in contradiction from the German, used to give the impression that they considered their army one great and enormous bother, a necessary evil, which had to be carried along although the idea of armies and fight and bloodshed is absolutely incompatible both with Christianity and with the new society of the future, which remains the hope of mankind, where the Germans pride themselves in their militaristic prowess and achievements. Yet, here you have this Commander Burzin talking exactly like a Russian war captain, boastfully, almost challengingly, and with the old adage like a first-class Junker.

One expects something else from Russia, from the new Russia. Then there was the question of the industrial speed-up movement known as "stachanovschina." Commander Burzin tried to convey the impression that it is something infinitely superior to the speed-up movement operating under the capitalist system. In theory this might sound correct to an impartial student of industry in general, but in practice it comes down to the same thing in Russia, I am afraid. Of course, the innovation of workers' clubs, leisure and culture, deserves nothing but praise. That, excellent, I wish we were as far as Russia is in that direction, but Commander Burzin is sure that the Russian worker is "hereditary" and is working for himself and not to support a parasitic class of bosses, represented by the commissarocracy?

Sterilization

In Germany.

"The sterilizations" that are being carried out in Germany are complementary to the removal of the Jews from German public life and of Jewry from the German economy. All these measures are the practical application of the doctrine elaborated by Hitler in the eleventh chapter of "Mein Kampf," the doctrine that there is nothing so important as the "purity" of the "Aryan race."

The purpose of the German "sterilization law" is to eliminate the physically and mentally "inferior," which they call "Aryans" or not. Systematic sterilization began in the first year of Hitler's chancellorship. Two hundred and fifty "hereditary and hereditary" and 26 "appeal boards" have been set up in Germany.

According to the official figures the boards gave orders for the sterilization of 35,000 persons; 75 per cent of these orders were carried out—the remaining 25 per cent were cancelled on appeal. The official commentators on the German sterilization law, Guett, Ruediger and Ruediger, state that the number of persons liable to sterilization in Germany is about 1,200,000, or about 2 per cent of the population.

Other national medical authorities, such as hereditary epileptics, chronic diplopia and astigmatism, chronic diplopia and astigmatism, the sterilization of those who suffer from them, but the practice is arbitrary and confused.

Although mental deficiency may result from cerebral injuries and be neither inherited nor transmissible, yet almost all mental defectives are compelled to undergo sterilization. As a rule, the attempt is made to ascertain whether the defect has been inherited or not. As for the defect itself, the most varied criteria are applied. Thus the municipal medical council at Reichenbach in Saxony declared that all backward board school children ought to be sterilized. A Nazi authority on infant welfare writes that 20,000 children ought to be sterilized yearly for several years to come. The same authority states that about half of the 70,000 to 90,000 inmates of the German child welfare institutions ought to be sterilized.

Feminine Spy.

Pauline Cushman was born in 1835, in New Orleans, of Creole ancestry, a future famous spy of the Union army. In 1863, she was acting in a play in Louisville, Ky., when she met her husband. Her role called for her to drink a toast to the Union. In Louisville at the time were a number of Confederate officers and one of them offered her $500 to drink a toast to the Confederacy instead. She secretly reported the offer to Union officers and was charged to use her as a spy.

Next performance she lifted a glass before a crowded house and cried, "Here's to Jeff Davis and the Southern Confederacy!" She always maintained her honor and her rights.

A riot resulted, and Pauline fled the city. She toured southern cities triumphantly and was enabled to obtain important information from Confederate officers which she passed on to the Union army. Inevitably suspicion fell upon her and was twice sentenced to die. Each time her seductive beauty and acting ability saved her. The Union army commissioned her major in recognition of her services.

She is not to be confused with Charlotte Saunders Cushman, famous actress of a later day.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

BY PAUL MALLON.

FEELER

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., June 25.—Mr. Roosevelt has adopted a personal platform plank of his own which may turn out to be more important than any adopted here.

A few days ago the White House casually announced that the President was appointing a three-man mission to go to Europe to study co-operative enterprises. No stress was put upon it, no significance attached to it. The move was lost in the noise of the convention hallulululs.

The story behind it is this: Some weeks back Mr. Roosevelt read a book called "Sweden: The Middle Way," by Marquis Childs. He became interested in its account of the way capitalism has been controlled there by consumer co-operatives and state competition with private business. At that time you may have read in this space the prediction that the next big New Deal move would be toward co-operative promotion. It has been discussed fully in the inner council since then.

Now he has picked a New Deal left winger, Jacob Baker, assistant WPA administrator, to conduct a study on the ground in Europe. He expects a report back within a few months; in time for use in the campaign.

STRONG ARM The purposes set forth in the book cannot be taken as indicating fully what Mr. Roosevelt has in mind.

But they at least indicate lines along which he is thinking. The book shows that one-third of all retail trade in Sweden is now carried on by co-operatives without profit. About 10 per cent of whole-sale trade and manufacturing for domestic consumption is likewise conducted by co-operatives. The system has been built up over a period of 40 years. In the royal family, a socialist government and a capitalist system all work side by side.

In line with these consumer co-operatives, the Swedes also have established state industries, which compete with private business. Lumber and electrical power generation are the two largest. Limited state monopolies also have been created in liquor and tobacco. (Profits from the monopolies, above a limited dividend, go to the state.)

The author defines the system as "a course between the absolute socialization of Russia, and the end of development of capitalism in America." He says: "The Swedes have not hesitated to curtail or abolish profit for the private businessman, when a desired change made this necessary."

INTEREST What interested the President primarily, his associates say, is that the system contained "marvelous possibilities as an anti-monopoly scheme," through state competition. It also contained the germ of experimentalism which always has fascinated him. His mission will visit all countries where co-operation has been tried: Denmark, where the rural marketing co-operatives and the land system have had unique development; Norway, where the co-operative fisheries furnish an example of collectivism, as well as England, where the co-operative movement started and flopped. But the Swedish system is apparently the most important in his mind.

PURPOSE Some presidential friends say he let this front paw of his co-operation cat out of the bag at this time only as a sop to the liberal extremists within his camp. Messrs. Tugwell, Lickens and Wallace have not fared very well among the office-holding delegates at Philadelphia. They had to have something. The fact seems to be the co-operative meat is a little too strong to be absorbed by delicate delegate constitutions, except as fed in tidbits of generalities.

ACTING General Farley is said to be sleeping with a handkerchief in his mouth so he will say nothing prematurely about what he intends to do with the postmaster generalship during the campaign. Nevertheless, his postal associates have heard he recently issued an order which will shortly require First Assistant Postmasters to sign himself as "acting postmaster general." Such acting would merely make Mr. Howes a rubber stamp, temporarily, for Farley for campaign purposes.

FLUX Much inside missionary work is supposed to have been performed upon wayward Senators Glass and Smith to get them back in sight of the delegates here. Glass is really tired and would have preferred to remain in Washington. Smith spoke in anger when he went out in protest against the convention invocation by a negro minister.

The fact is, many delegates have gone home, not because they were angry but because the show has been rather dull and there is nothing much for them to do. Everybody gets very tired of conventions after the second day.

Places of the missing, however, have been largely taken up by people coming in for the Roosevelt acceptance speech Saturday night. Those who have talked with Mr. Roosevelt on the telephone since the convention started have remarked how gay and cheerful he has been. His messengers, lately arrived from Washington, say he looks the way to go. Apparently he has been delighted by the convention trend, and the extent to which he has been able to guide it smoothly.

CONVENTION SCOPE A reporter who hears very well is willing to swear he heard Dr. Townsend say to a group of democrats, not the republicans. Also that the Townsends would tie up with old established radical organizations in several states to get on the ballot.

NOTES General Farley's wire pullers began to worry among themselves after the second day because they had stretched the convention too long. They discovered there was not enough business to keep anyone interested that long, even with Eddie Dowling as master of ceremonies.

The most entertaining convention entertainment was provided newsman at a home called "The Castle," about four blocks from the auditorium, where Attorney General Cummings was host.

The text of Senator Robinson's speech contained a line about the republicans' charge that the New Deal have "flaunted" the supreme court. He corrected it to "flouted" when he said, "I maintain that the republicans had used the wrong word and misled him."

The headquarters hotel dance orchestra has definite orders not to play "Oh Suzanna" or "The Sidewalks of New York," probably as a protective measure to save the boys from slaughter.

There is nothing in the rumor that the platform subcommittee which held the all-night wake in a hotel room had a deck of cards but no copy of the platform.

A radio trio has been warbling "Is It True What They Say About Roosevelt?" which seems to be the Philadelphia republican theme song. (Copyright, 1936, by Paul Mallon.)

Watermelons

Several days ago this column reported discovery of an old belief that watermelon should be eaten on the Fourth of July. It was a new idea here, and a polite "How Come?" was appended to the item.

Immediately a good friend of mine, who has been a devotee of watermelon for many years, offered information that many years ago, Georgia watermelons were not ready for market before the Fourth and were not considered healthy to eat "shipped" melons.

That, of course, was in the days before refrigerator cars and all the other modern marvels of transportation.

From Decatur come two postcards on the melon question. Says the first, in reference to my confession that melons do not agree with my interior well-being:

"Perhaps you eat the melon before the 4th of July and are careless enough to swallow the pulp." Perhaps that's the answer.

The second reads:

"Fair lady is quite right, watermelon before the 4th of July is 'not good for you.' This information was given to me over and over as I grew up in Arkansas, and the fact that was all right to eat watermelon on that day made the 4th of July picnic a gala event."

FAIR ENOUGH

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.

Sterling

PHILADELPHIA, June 25.—For several years your correspondent has been hearing that the real deliberations of the rulers of the American people are not conducted in open meeting but formally in more or less social clubs usually impromptu. So Wednesday afternoon, because it was raining and because the program of the democratic convention called for business of a routine nature, your correspondent did not go out to the hall. Instead, he went nutting around the lobby of the Bellevue-Stratford hotel where he met, first, an old colleague of the sport business who was looking for Frank Frisch because the St. Louis Browns had been raised out of a ball game; next Mr. Teddy Hayes, late trainer of Jack Dempsey and Mickey Walker, and, presently, the Hon. J. Cannon, member of congress from Milwaukee.

Congressman Cannon is a sterling statesman who keeps ever before him the sacrifice of the heroes of Valley Forge, the sacred heritage of the founding fathers, the undying principles of Jefferson, Jackson and Lincoln. At each mention of the heroes of Valley Forge, the sacred heritage, the undying principles and the constitutional rights of the accused, each member of the little circle at the table, at first, would bow his head in a moment of silent reverence. Later on, it got so that each member would get up and march three times around the table at each mention of these priceless mementoes, singing "I Get a Kick Out of You."

Pegler Your correspondent forgot to mention that in order to obtain the true story of the democratic convention he practiced sleuthing.

"Don't you ever buy," your correspondent implied, "a drink, you cad?"

"Why you cur," said Congressman Cannon with an evil leer, "you know never take intoxicants in any way, shape or form."

"Good," your correspondent said. And when the little circle was seated at the table your correspondent mentioned the case of the memorable Chicago Black Sox who faked the World Series of 1919 between Chicago and Cincinnati. Mr. Cannon, the criminal lawyer, defended the accused rights of the accused in that deplorable vulture-swoop upon the very tap roots of the ideal of Americanism.

"The sacred rights of the accused," Congressman Cannon said, "will ever be uppermost in my thoughts. And Valley Forge and Jefferson, Jackson and Lincoln."

"Which Jackson do you mean?" your correspondent asked. "Do you mean Andrew, Stonewall or Stephen?"

"The first," said Congressman Cannon. "Well, I want to tell you something, you cynical, smart-cracking, overeducated Broadway fop."

"Yes, fop," the congressman said. "E. O. P. Broadway. Let me tell you something about the sacred rights of the accused. But first let me hear you tell the waiter something."

At this, your correspondent, who is bright at repartee and quick to play a trick, raised a spoon and poured a glass standing on the table. Congressman Cannon and two colleagues in statesmanship and two colleagues in law were fighting in the doorway to get through to the street when your correspondent exclaimed, "gentlemen! gentlemen! calm down. Be calm. That was not an ambulance bell."

Your correspondent told the waiter something and Congressman Cannon began his story.

Story There was, it seems, an honest American citizen in Milwaukee who wished to uplift the common man and, to this end, decided to sell breeding rabbits by mail. He promised to buy from his clients at a profit to him all the progeny of the original stock. He advertised in certain magazines, offering three dollars for a pair of rabbits, and $24. He rented an office, snug and small, in a building fronting on three streets and used this address in his advertisements. He had a lot of love letters, some of which he showed to his friends. Some persons took this to suggest that there was an enormous warehouse but that was due to his fault or their careless thinking.

Not being the ugly subject of sex into a political essay, there were unavoidable errors in the shipping department of the rabbit firm. The rabbits were grown and shipped by mail. He made mistakes, shipping three little girl rabbits or three little boy girls and one little boy. This made all the difference in the world. Friendships did not ripen. The play was not a success for the customers to sell back to Congressman Cannon's client and presently the man was arrested on a false charge of using the mails to defraud.

Congressman Cannon says it is very hard to distinguish little girl rabbits from little boy rabbits and he believes with all his heart in the idealism of his nature that criminal intent was lacking.

He and his client were walking to court one day to make bail. The client had $300,000 cash in a little sack and Congressman Cannon said, "if you are tired I will carry the sack."

"But he had a lion's heart," the congressman said. He gave me a look as he was, he said, "I wouldn't burden you with the $300,000 cash. I will carry the sack."

"I fought and fought for my client's constitutional rights," said Congressman Cannon. "I was arrested on a false charge of using the mails to defraud."

"Twice we went to the court, I appeals and up again. And, finally, by a gross miscarriage of justice, he was sentenced to one year in Leavenworth prison. I thought Jackson—not Joe, the fleet of foot, but Stonewall Andy—of the sacred heritage and Valley Forge—and persevered but all for nothing. My good friend sold more than $500,000 worth of rabbits."

"About six months after he went away, his name forever smirched with a foul blot, his rights sullied by the evil smirch of you know what I mean, you get the idea, I went out to Leavenworth to see a client about a matter. And there at the train was my rabbit man in a white linen suit and straw hat and swinging a cane, the Grover Whalen of Leavenworth prison, greeting distinguished guests. They knew he was the victim of a foul smirch of injustice."

"And I will ever keep before my eyes, as a guiding star in my career, the sacred heritage of Valley Forge and Andrew Justice and constitutional miscarriage."

Your correspondent rang the glass with the spoon once more, like an ambulance bell.

There was a terrific scuffle of democratic patriots at the door of the room. They are still carrying out lawyer statesmen of the democratic convention, dead and wounded in the scuffle.

That's Just It.

"You can have the job as cashier—the wages are $200 a month."

"You can't go far on that, sir."

"I don't want a cashier to go far."

One Who Buys Stolen Goods Must Share the Guilt of the Thief

BY ROBERT QUILLEN.

When any person produces something new and original, whether a mouse trap, a soothing syrup or a comic strip, it is his individual property.

By every rule of common sense, common justice and common law, he owns it as indisputably as he owns a house built of his own material, on his own land, by his own hands. And the law recognizes this right, even holding that a private letter is the property of the writer and may not be reproduced without his permission.

While the patent and copyright laws protect the originator in some instances, they do not protect him from the thieves called imitators. A new idea may belong to anyone who can use it, but to imitate a product with the intention of profiting by the originator's reputation is to rob him of a portion of his fair reward.

The imitator reaps where he did not sow. He is the typical chiseler, by trickery claiming a portion of the land that a better man discovered. He should be despised and ignored by all who love fair play and honesty, but people are prone to forget ethics in order to save a nickel.

Consider, for example, the way of the Japanese and the indifference of our people.

The Japs are "great imitators." And since no law or power can prevent it, they imitate both the product and the wrapper of the American manufacturer.

The American product wins a market in China by merit alone. The Jap then produces an inferior article, exactly counterfeits the American wrapper (even to the Blue Eagle when that bird was popular) and takes the market by lowering the price.

The Chinaman buys because he is fooled. The American, not fooled at all, buys the imitation because it is cheaper.

The whole structure of commerce and civilization is built on faith in the other man's honor. Destroy that and nothing is left but cheat, fool, cheat.

And we help to destroy it every time we patronize the cheat who gets his profit by violating the rules of decent ethics.

5 CANDIDATES SEEK LEGION LEADERSHIP

National Defense Urged by General Gasser at Athens Convention.

ATHENS, Ga., June 25.—(AP)—A five-man race for state commander of the American Legion got under way tonight as the Georgia department of the organization opened its three-day annual convention.

The election will not come until Saturday morning, but even before the formal welcoming ceremonies and the address tonight of Brigadier General L. D. Gasser, chief of staff of the fourth corps area of the army, friends of the various candidates were busy contacting delegates.

D. Weaver Bridges, of Athens; Cash Hammond, of Gainesville; C. B. McCullar, of Milledgeville; Ed O'Connor, of Savannah, and J. E. Overstreet, of Sylva, were among those mentioned for the command. Delegates—except those booming one or the other of the candidates—were reluctant to predict the outcome of the race.

Albany Seeks Session. Legion and civic leaders of Albany kept busy, meanwhile, lining up support for Albany's bid for the next convention. The 40 and 8, another organization of war veterans, held its one-day convention today and named M. A. O'Connor, of Augusta, grand chef de gare. He succeeds Henry H. Green, of Atlanta.

Legionnaires, members of the 40 and 8, and of the Legion Auxiliary and the Sons of the Legion, all in convention here, gathered in groups on the streets and in hotel lobbies during the day to exchange greetings, and to sing and form impromptu parades. The visitors frequently tied up traffic, and then joined good-natured Athens policemen in the apparently futile task of reopening traffic lanes. Some of the visitors gave street corner concerts, and various drum and bugle corps paraded the streets. The big parade will come tomorrow.

Major Ben T. Watkins, of Macon, state commander of the Legion, predicted the meeting here would be one of the most successful and best attended on record. Although formal business sessions do not begin until tomorrow, registrations exceeded 1,800 today, even before noon. Athens Legionnaires said attendance might reach 4,000.

Leaders of the Legion made plans for an active fight for support throughout the country for Georgia's choice for national commander, Quimby Melton, of Griffin. Melton, long prominent in state and national Legion affairs, was reported by Georgia Legionnaires to be in line for the national command and the Georgia Legion plans to make a concerted fight for his election.

Melton is editor of the Griffin Daily News and is prominent in journalistic and civic circles in the state. Reports of officers and committee chairmen will feature tomorrow's session.

On tonight's program, besides General Gasser, were Mayor Thomas S. Mehl, President Harmon Caldwell, of the University of Georgia; Dr. H. W. Birdsong, commander of a Legion post here; Mrs. Jacob Joel, president of the Athens Legion Auxiliary, who were among those who extended greetings of welcome. Miss Helen Estes, of Gainesville, president of the auxiliary; De Lacey Allen, of Albany, former state commander; Henry Green, Atlanta, retiring chief of the 40 and 8, and Charles Baddour, of Albany, head of the Sons of the Legion, were called on for responses.

General Gasser speaks. Brigadier General Gasser told the state convention tonight that "it behooves us to look to our plans for national defense."

"The need," he said, "is apparent to any casual student of current events."

In analyzing the international situation what do we find? Europe in arms today as never before. Those nations satisfied with the status quo as a result of the Versailles treaty vs. the nations whose boundaries were curtailed, and who lost their colonies, constitute a situation which, due to the repeated failures of the League of Nations, is rapidly dividing Europe into armed camps on the basis of offensive and defensive alliances, all jockeying for a favorable position in preparation for a future war in the constant race for economic and political preference."

General Gasser was introduced by Quimby Melton.

REV. BARNWELL LEAVES FOR VISIT TO ENGLAND

SAVANNAH, Ga., June 25.—(AP)—The Rt. Rev. Middleton Stuart Barnwell, D. D., bishop coadjutor of the diocese of Georgia of the Episcopal church, will sail Saturday from New York on a summer vacation in England.

Bishop Barnwell left Savannah tonight by train, accompanied by Mrs. Barnwell. They will meet friends at New York who will accompany them on the trip.

The bishop said he had no definite plans for his stay in England. The party is scheduled to land at Southampton and will spend the summer visiting places of interest throughout the nation. He said he and Mrs. Barnwell will return to Savannah about September 9.

GEORGIA POSTMASTERS RENAME MRS. RUSHING

Atlanta Selected as Next Convention City at Albany Meeting.

ALBANY, Ga., June 25.—(AP)—Mrs. L. Bertie Rushing, of Greenville, was re-elected president and Atlanta was chosen as the next convention city at the closing session today of the National League of District Postmasters, Georgia branch, in convention here.

B. N. Walters, of Martin, was re-elected vice president and Miss Melie Pitts, of Newborn, secretary-treasurer. W. M. Miller, of Colquitt, and J. E. Jones, of Lula, were elected second and third vice presidents, respectively.

All of the executive board members were re-elected. They are: W. D. Bennett, of Molena; Mrs. Rosa Lindsey, of Irwinton, and Paul L. Miles, of Metter.

The convention passed resolutions indorsing bills to fix compensation of fourth-class postmasters; grant equipment allowances to third-class postmasters; to extend civil service to first, second and third-class postmasters; to provide that 100 per cent of annual gross receipts, including money order fees, be credited for annual class of postmasters; to grant retirement benefits to fourth-class postmasters and annual sick leave to third and fourth-class postmasters.

An elaborate electrical air mail map, constructed in Macon under the direction of C. B. McElroy, assistant postmaster, will be dedicated to Harilee Branton, second assistant postmaster general. It was announced, W. A. Pattillo, Macon postmaster, asked for suggestions for the dedication, and the postmasters by unanimous vote chose Mr. Branton.

Mrs. Rushing and Miss Pitts were elected delegates to the national convention, which will be held in St. Paul.

W. L. West, of Decatur, urged the postmasters to try to get their patrons to use air mail service by showing them how much time they will save. He urged them to bring to the attention of their patrons the necessity for putting street addresses on all communications.

Paul Miles, of Metter, spoke of the change which has been brought about in human relations through conventions, civic clubs and similar organizations.

Mrs. Olivia P. Anderson, of Chipley, read a letter which had been printed in the Muscogee Democrat, September 20, 1849, from an "Albany democrat." It told of the political situation of that period.

Mrs. Rosa L. Lindsey, of Irwinton, spoke of the need for women to awaken to the needs and ideals of citizenship. Rudolph Greer, postal inspector, answered questions in a round-table discussion.

HACKETT IS PROMOTED BY BIBB TEXTILE FIRM

MACON, Ga., June 25.—(AP)—Frank N. Hackett, for the last two years in the employ of the Bibb Manufacturing Company at Payne mill here, has been promoted to the cotton department and transferred to the Bibb City (Columbus) plant of the company. It is announced at the general offices here.

Hackett is a son of W. W. Hackett, division passenger agent of the Central of Georgia railway. He succeeds Roy Tatum, who recently resigned to engage in the cotton warehouse business in Greenville, S. C.

Announcement also was made of the promotion of L. M. Thompson, former overseer of spooling and warping at the Columbus plant, to the position of office manager. Thompson is from Decatur, and has been with the Bibb Manufacturing Company since he graduated from Georgia Tech several years ago.

LEIGH REUNION.

LAFAYETTE, Ga., June 25.—A reunion of the Leigh family was held at Wright's Mineral Springs near Lafayette, and the honoree was Mrs. W. M. Leigh, who celebrated her 78th birthday anniversary. Sixty-five relatives and friends of the family were present.

TAX MUDDLE FEARED BY SAVANNAH MAYOR

Proposed Law Would Leave City Stripped of Needed Services, Says Executive.

Mayor Thomas Gamble, of Savannah, expressed alarm yesterday over a proposed constitutional amendment limiting Georgia taxation to 15 mills. Gamble's remarks were in a letter filed in the office of Governor Eugene Talmadge.

"The city of Savannah would be in a very serious predicament if new forms of taxation were not provided," Gamble wrote to the Governor and Senator Lester, of Augusta, head of a legislative committee studying implications of the amendment.

"Under the proposed constitutional amendment it appears to me that cities and counties are being robbed of home rule, with power centralized at the state capitol, and with the legislature empowered every two years to change the system of assessing and levying and collecting taxes, so that there would be no certainty where any city or county stood beyond a two-year period."

"I feel, as do Savannahians in general, that there should be some means of lifting some of the burden off real estate, but that this should be done in such a way that the necessary public activities of a city or town government, or the public school system, shall not be curtailed or destroyed as to menace the interests of an entire community."

The mayor expressed concern because no definite taxes had been proposed to make up for the loss of revenue which he said the amendment would entail.

"Savannah, in common with all other municipal governments, is left under the shadow of a great apprehension as to where it will stand with regard to funds with which to operate if the constitutional amendment is adopted without anyone knowing what taxes are to be proposed, considered and provided for by the legislature."

"Inasmuch as you have frequently stated that you are entirely opposed to a sales tax, and in my conversation with you a fortnight ago you reaffirmed this position, and inasmuch as public sentiment in a large way seems to be opposed to a sales tax, that source of revenue will apparently be removed from contemplation."

Cites Ohio Law. The mayor expressed regard for an Ohio law which allows city governments to hold elections in which the people may provide additional funds for city operations over and above the constitutional limitation.

Gamble said it had been proposed that part of the 6-cent gasoline tax be taken from the highway department and devoted to making up the deficit in the state, county and city revenues. He said there was bitter opposition to this.

He said he had been unable to get any information from Senator Lester regarding new tax plans. He said Lester had declined to announce the proposals "until after election, in order that the minds of the people may not be disturbed by new forms of taxation."

"It is certainly regrettable that there has not been some provisions made in advance for the providing of these revenues," the mayor wrote.

Future Outlook. "I must confess that I and others are left very much in the dark as to how the enormous shrinkage in state, county and city incomes which would result under the tax limitation is to be overcome, and how our schools are to be properly provided for, and how our cities and towns are to function as their people require."

"The decrease in the income of the city of Savannah under the proposed constitutional limitation amendment would represent the total cost of the operations of a number of the city departments which are absolutely essential to the safety and the comfort and the convenience of the Savannah public."

They are: Police department, $256,000; fire department, $230,000; health and bacteriological, $85,000; parks and trees, $45,000; harbors and wharfs, $5,000; recreation, $7,000; auditorium, $5,000; freight traffic bureau, $5,000. Total $597,000."

WALMSLEY TO RESIGN AS NEW ORLEANS HEAD

that he would present his resignation to a meeting of the city council Tuesday.

In reply, Maestri said he wished Walmsley success and that he felt sure the mayor would keep his word.

While Long was battling Walmsley to gain control of the city government, he had the legislature pass laws which took away much of the mayor's authority, but now the legislature had restored to Maestri's prospective administration more power than Walmsley formerly held.

Walmsley is resigning a year and a half before his four-year term of office is up. He made no announcement of his future plans except to say that he intended to resume his practice of law.

When his announcement reached Baton Rouge, where the legislature is in session, a storm of debate arose over a bill to abolish the 1935 city elections and make the elective city officers holders until 1942.

Senator James A. Noe, an administration critic, charged "political trading" among "a few politicians to make a man mayor for six years" and declared the bill would "fix Bob Maestri as the head of a new ring to control the 1940 (state-wide) election."

"It will dictate politics in Louisiana like the old ring never did do," said Noe. "In other words, all that Huey P. Long ever fought for has gone up the alley."

Senators replied with praise for Maestri and declared they considered Noe's remarks were "not well founded."

Senator E. S. Clements, of Oberlin, declared Maestri had given Long assistance in 1920 during the impeachment of Long, then governor.

"When Senator Long was being impeached," declared Clements, "it was Robert Maestri with $25,000 that saved the greatest leader this state ever had."

Others said the country people "thought a lot of Bob Maestri" and the senate passed the bill 36 to 1 with Noe casting the single dissenting vote.

GADSDEN MOB ROUTS UNION'S ORGANIZERS

the organizers and hustled them into the street.

Police who rushed into the melee and rescued the beleaguered men said none apparently was hurt seriously.

The incident followed the launching of an intensive drive to organize employees of the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company plant here.

Previous Beating.

The drive was called after S. H. Dalrymple, of Akron, Ohio, president of the United Rubber Workers, told police he was beaten three weeks ago following a preliminary organization meeting.

Frank Grillo, secretary of the organization, in a statement at Akron, said the Goodyear Company was responsible for today's outbreak.

"The responsibility for the mobbing of our organizers rests directly on the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company," Grillo said.

"Impartial witnesses have informed us that Goodyear flying squadrons led in the attack. If any serious injury is done to our men we are holding every city official and the company responsible, and we certainly will take immediate action to punish the guilty ones."

"No effort or money will be too great to bring this mob to justice."

No Arrests Made.

No arrest was made immediately in connection with the alleged attack on Dalrymple or today's demonstration.

The crowd formed in the center of this industrial community of 25,000, during the afternoon. As it moved toward the headquarters, one of the union men leaned from a window and remonstrated vainly.

Authorities who came to the rescue spirited the organizers to the city hall. A police detail hurried to their hotel as the crowd started in that direction.

All the union representatives to be found immediately were concentrated in the city hall, behind a line of police. Later they were escorted to their hotel and police said, at their own request, they were given protection out of town.

Spectators said no guns and no sticks were in evidence during the outbreak.

VICTIMS OF MOB
GO TO BIRMINGHAM

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., June 25.—(AP)—Victims of mob action, with several of their group battered and bleeding, 11 men arrived here tonight from Gadsden, Ala., where they were assaulted while engaged in United Rubber Workers' Union activity among employees of the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co.

George R. Roberts, representative of the American Federation of Labor and one of the most severely beaten, said he would not know the next step in organization work among the rubber workers until he confers with union headquarters in Akron, Ohio.

Roberts said besides himself the most severely hurt in Gadsden today were John D. House, president local

No. 2, United Rubber Workers, at Akron, and W. Thompson, member of United Rubber Workers' executive board, and E. L. Gary, Gadsden organizer.

None was critically hurt.

The A. P. of L. representative named other union men who left the city as William Boyle, Akron organizer; Charles Lesley, Akron; E. D. Lindsey, Gadsden; C. S. Holmes, Gadsden; Stanley Edwards, Akron; Lester Thomas, Akron, and J. E. Foreman, Akron.

Mrs. Roberts and Mrs. House were with the group arriving here, but were not hurt.

GOVERNOR GRAVES
ORDERS INVESTIGATION

PHILADELPHIA, June 25.—(AP)—Governor Bibb Graves, of Alabama, sent Adjutant General Coleman tonight to Gadsden, Ala., to investigate reports of labor trouble at the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company plant there.

Frank Grillo, of the United Rubber Workers, telegraphed Postmaster General Farley that Akron, Ohio, was threatened with a general strike unless the Gadsden situation was adjusted.

Farley communicated with Graves through Edward F. McGrady, assistant labor secretary.

All are attending the democratic national convention.

Graves said he was keeping in close touch with Gadsden and had asked the sheriff there to advise him if the possibility of disorders occurred.

"The situation there is not serious," Graves said, "but it might become so."

FIFTH DISTRICT LAGS
IN NOMINATORS DRIVE

delphia I found unusual enthusiasm and nation-wide interest in the success of the drive of Roosevelt nominators. Providing the sinews of war is essential to success of the Roosevelt-Garner campaign. I am sure Georgia will not fail to reach her quota under your leadership and our response will be worthy of our cause."

Rally Today.

Milligan and Wells yesterday planned for the district-wide rally to be held at the city hall at 4 o'clock this afternoon and stressed the importance of a concerted day of activity to prevent the district from failing to march along with other Georgia districts.

They also urged workers to bring in as full reports as possible in order that a definite checkup can be made at the earliest possible moment.

A preliminary check yesterday caused pessimism of Milligan and Wells. It was a discouraging report and, unless strenuous work is put in today and citizens respond more readily, the appearance of little likelihood that the fifth congressional district will go over the top, Wells warned.

"It would be a reflection on the fine democracy of the fifth district to fail in this matter," a joint statement by Wells and Milligan pointed out.

Quota of $20,000.

"Our quota has been set at $20,000. We have a population of about 500,000 in the district. That is a big enough. We must not fail to do our full duty in this important matter. The fifth district should lead the way. We should win the cup, but unless there is spirited activity today, we will fall short of our mark."

"Mr. Roosevelt and party leaders have decided they do not want large individual contributions. The Roosevelt administration has been one in the interest of the common people of America. If individuals make large contributions, and plenty of them not only are willing but are anxious to do so, they will expect favors at the hands of the administration."

Only Campaign.

"That is not what Mr. Roosevelt wants. He wants to be united and undivided. He wants to do what he believes is best for the people as a whole. Republicans will have many millions of dollars, subscribed by special interests, determined to end the democratic regime. This ticket sale at $1 each is the only campaign for funds which, it is expected, will be given in Georgia in behalf of the national campaign."

"Booths are located at Five Points and at the Henry Grady monument at Marietta and Forsyth streets. We wish to take this opportunity to urge citizens who have not yet subscribed to do so at once."

"Democracy needs that dollar, and the fifth district must have it if the local campaign is to be successful."

AUDIT IS SUBMITTED ON KENTUCKY FINANCES

FRANKFORT, Ky., June 25.—(AP)—Kentucky is getting on the right side of the ledger to the tune of approximately $500,000 a month, figures available in the office of State Auditor Ernest L. Shannon disclosed today.

General fund receipts so far this month have been $1,211,203.75. For the same period general fund expenses have been $417,229.98, and unpaid bills of about $300,000 are listed. These last two items subtracted from receipts leave $494,073.77 as surplus for the month, which probably will exceed the half-million mark by June 30.

For all state funds, including highway, figures showed the state has made a net financial gain of $4,150,000 since January 1. The outstanding state warrants have been reduced by $5,116,125.56, while cash balances have fallen only $956,636.96.

He added:

"We are flooding our cities with new millions of arms and legs at the very time when invention has made mere muscle superabundant and has put a premium on brains."

"This process frustrates democracy by sterilizing the families that generate statesmen, and creating manipulative masses who get born, bred and die before they can possibly find out what it is all about."

The incompetent once were ruthlessly weeded out by natural selection, he continued, while "generosity and charity now preserve them."

"No constitution could be good enough to enable such a stock to preserve its civilization," Durant said.

He added:

"Political machines grow out of the mob, and stand between honest ability and public office. Men are selected for office because of their political skill, and then are called upon to deal with issues requiring economic know-

THE FINE ART OF BEACH LOUNGING A Place in the Sun for Comfortable Attire

Full enjoyment of the beach requires more than just the actual bathing costume. In fact, beach-lounging has become a fine art. The development of this pleasant recreation has created the need for various articles to enhance its enjoyment, and these articles are available. There was a time when those who found pleasure in a day beside the water were quite satisfied with lounging about in a bathing suit, more or less wet, with a sweater or jacket of some kind as the only essential added accessory. While fashion at present eliminates with one hand all but the briefest of swimming trunks, with the other it indicates a number of comfort-giving lounging garments that are as practical as they are smart. Perhaps a contributing factor in the increased popularity of lounging attire is the fact that the brief swimming trunk presents no hardship in changing.

Rule sport shirts are light, cool and comfortable for water-side lounging. They're smart in plain colors or patterns.

Fashion leans to the open-front beach shirt of peasant linen or other equally practical coarse woven fabrics.

Beach slacks contribute to comfort. They may be had in peasant linen, sailcloth, mohair crash and many other appropriate fabrics.

An alternate for beach slacks and preferred by many is the short, made in the same materials and manner as the slacks.

A new foot fashion from Norway and England is the leather shoe. Unlike the usual moccasin, it will take a polish and has a more finished appearance, plus both sole and heel. It is used for country and resort wear as well as beach lounging.

AMERICAN CIVILIZATION MAY END, DURANT SAYS

Great Danger in 'Breeding From Bottom,' Kiwanians Are Told.

WASHINGTON, June 25.—(AP)—Will Durant warned delegates to the Kiwanis International convention today that American civilization may collapse unless it stops "breeding from the bottom and dying from the top."

The New York philosopher and author said the low birth rate of the able and the high birth rate of the mediocre were frustrating both recovery and democracy.

"We are flooding our cities with new millions of arms and legs at the very time when invention has made mere muscle superabundant and has put a premium on brains."

"This process frustrates democracy by sterilizing the families that generate statesmen, and creating manipulative masses who get born, bred and die before they can possibly find out what it is all about."

LANGER IS TRAILING
GOVERNOR WELFORD

FARGO, N. D., June 25.—(AP)—A trend favorable to former Governor William Langer in late reporting rural areas kept alive tonight his hope for victory in his "come-back" contest with Governor Walter Welford.

But tabulations from more than half of the state's 2,242 precincts in Wednesday's primary kept the Governor 10,000 votes to the fore in their race for the republican nomination to the office he now holds. The vote in 1,206 precincts was: Welford 57,206; Langer 47,786.

The size of a "complimentary" vote he said was need for Congressman William Lemke, led William Stern, republican national committeeman, to declare it would "not be surprising" if Lemke carried the state as union party candidate for president.

Lemke was unopposed for one of two republican nominations for congress and his votes were not generally tabulated. The union party chief has not yet filed in his home state for president on his new ticket.

Dixie Delegations Make a Deal But Refuse Dizzy Dean as 'Boot'

Death of Two-Thirds Rule Recalls Now-Departed Days of Wilson-Clark, Smith-McAdoo, Cox-Douglas and Other Historic Sluggests.

By JOHN LARDNER.

(Copyright, 1936, by North American Newspaper Alliance, Inc.)

PHILADELPHIA, June 25.—In a last-minute deal, completed within the deadline of the 1936 trading season, the southern democrats gave up their good old two-thirds nominating rule in exchange for two infielders, a left-handed pitcher, and plenty of red hot representation in 1940.

It looked for a while as though the gents from Dixie would get nothing at all for their trouble. In fact, they were going around shouting "We were robbed!" in the manner of Joe Louis, and one of them, Judge W. C. Davis, of Texas, was describing the whole thing as a Farley plot.

"Farley," said the judge, "is going to kill the good old rule and try for the nomination himself in 1940."

This unpleasant rumor was eventually headed off and buried by the backers of the new majority system, who saw clearly that they would have to make concessions to gain their end. They offered Dizzy Dean, but Dixie vetoed the scheme by saying he was satisfied in St. Louis. Then there was talk of giving the south a few extra senators, but everyone agreed there were too many senators already, both northern and southern style.

A Good Fight, But Short.

Finally, the men from the south decided to settle for bigger and better representation in 1940. It was a pretty peaceful settlement, and pretty disappointing to 300 correspondents.

I'll admit, though, that the fight was fun while it lasted. As long as the Roosevelt-Farley high command tried to railroad its program through, the indignation and confusion of the rival statesmen knew no bounds.

"This is a kick in the seat of the breeches," bawled Governor Jimmy Alford, of Texas, the leading tobacco-spitter-by-proxy of the southwest. "What would have happened to the great Woodrow Wilson if we hadn't had the two-thirds rule back in 1921?"

Congressman Doughton, of North Carolina, had an answer for this. "We would have elected the great Champ Clark," he replied, "and believe me, the great Champ Clark was just as good as the great Woodrow Wilson, if not better."

To tell you the truth, I think a lot of these delegates were more interested in refiguring the Clark-Wilson fight than in anything else. It must have been quite a scrap, to hear them tell it. It went 48 rounds, with Wilson winning by a technical knockout.

I have heard fight managers rebash the Jeffries-Corbett fight and the Dempsey-Firpo fight and many other famous controversial slugfests. Sometimes they get violent and do it with gestures, in which case you are likely to see history repeating itself and one or more managers lying on the floor.

Then I have listened to cultured gentlemen like Ely Culbertson and L. Hal Sims as they reviewed the bidding after a bridge hand. Often these gents forgot their culture and used words which you would not care to have our pet Alfrede overhear, let alone your wife and kiddies.

Battles That Were Battles.

But bridge players and fight managers are merely unskilled companions to a southern delegate on the warpath, and the reshaping of the great Clark-Wilson fight has produced some very vivid language at this convention. If you sprayed your garden with it, there wouldn't be a bug alive for miles around.

Besides, the Clark-Wilson fight is no longer a subject to be mentioned because I can't hurt the baby and I can't hurt Colonel Lindbergh."

"Do you know that it was President Roosevelt that called in the gold bill?" he asked.

"Well, just stop and think about that. If it hadn't been for President Roosevelt there would have been no trial."

Hauptmann was arrested after police traced to him a $10 gold ransom note with which he had bought gasoline.

Of the convention, he would only say:

"This is a novelty to me as I've never attended one before. I've been a democrat all my life and I'm for Roosevelt from A to Z."

PHILADELPHIA, June 25.—(AP)—Dr. John F. Condon, of the "Jafsie" of the Lindbergh case, came to the democratic convention today as "a good American" and credited President Roosevelt with being largely responsible for the arrest of Bruno Richard Hauptmann.

In good humor and talkative, Condon discussed the case in which he was the ransom intermediary, and said he no longer was obliged to remain quiet "because I can't hurt the baby and I can't hurt Colonel Lindbergh."

"Do you know that it was President Roosevelt that called in the gold bill?" he asked.

"Well, just stop and think about that. If it hadn't been for President Roosevelt there would have been no trial."

Hauptmann was arrested after police traced to him a $10 gold ransom note with which he had bought gasoline.

U. S. WILL EXPEDITE NAVY SPY CASE TRIAL

rious flagships of the United States fleet here and at San Diego.

It is charged he sold to the Japanese navy officer confidential documents stolen from the United States fleet.

The indictment said he boarded the destroyer Brooks in San Diego, unlawfully wearing a navy uniform, and abstracted some papers. The Brooks is a relief flagship of destroyer squadron 2 of the scouting force.

Other charges enumerated against Thompson include:

Boarding the target ship, former battleship Utah, and obtaining information. This is the radio-controlled ship in which there is much secret apparatus.

The same day, November 15, 1934, Thompson boarded the dreadnaught Mississippi, one of the recently modernized dreadnaughts of the navy's modern division.

Thompson had an index to the files of the dreadnaught Tennessee in January, 1935.

He had a report on short range battle practice of the dreadnaught New Mexico, flagship of the most powerful modernized unit of the fleet.

During March, 1935, just before the highly publicized annual maneuvers, Problem XVII, against which much criticism had been made in Japan, Thompson boarded three of the important vessels of the fleet.

They were the flagship dreadnaught Pennsylvania, the 16-inch gun dreadnaught Colorado, and one of the newest heavy cruisers, the Northampton, flagship of the leading division of the scouting fleet.

Deputy United States Attorney Thomas said the investigation and indictments involved only the two men, Thompson and the Japanese naval officer.

"Reports that a Japanese woman was involved emanated from Thompson's statement that he knew a Japanese woman," said Thomas. "We have found no connection between her and the conspiracy."

Hint of General Strike Is Heard As Communists Turn From Politics

NEW YORK, June 25.—(AP)—The communist party turned its convention from politics to "the class struggle" today while enthusiastically cheering delegates were told by key-note speakers that:

A communist-inspired general strike, patterned after the recent French labor movement, was starting in Michigan automobile plants.

The party was making sweeping inroads among west coast marine workers.

Company unions in the steel industry were being undermined.

The 725 delegates to the national convention started ovation after ovation as Jack Johnstone, of San Francisco, and Jack Stachel, of New York, sounded the theme of today's session—"Workers of the World Unite."

Behind the scenes, the party's smoothly working steering organization, the presiding committee, divided in two sections, one working on resolutions and the other on the platform that will be presented to the mass meeting in Madison Square Garden Sunday, when presidential and vice presidential candidates are nominated.

Stachel, member of the central committee of the party in charge of labor affairs, sounded the hint of a communist-inspired general strike.

His eyes closed, he spoke sadly of the recent lapse of the "broad strike program."

Then, thrusting his head forward, he brought the delegates to their feet in a burst of cheering as he shouted:

"Now, there is a change toward a new strike wave!"

Given time, he said, "it will develop spontaneously."

"We must prepare for a major struggle to obtain the demands of the workers."

The strike wave, he said, "inspired by the great strike of our comrades in France" is beginning in the Michigan auto plants.

"The French victory has stimulated the strike movement in the United States. The Michigan auto workers, inspired, are talking about the French strike move and sit-down strikes similar to those in France and Belgium are beginning in the Michigan auto plants."

In the morning session, Johnstone, a member of the presiding committee from California, struck similar enthusiasm as he told of communist inroads along the ranks of longshoremen and sailors on the Pacific coast.

At the start of the afternoon session, by a rising vote the convention endorsed the strike of RCA-Victor employees in Camden, N. J., pledging "the solidarity and the assistance of the communist party."

B. K. Gebert, delegate from the Allegheny valley of Pennsylvania, described the efforts to organize the steel workers in industrial unions and said communism was making definite strides in undermining company unions in the steel industry.

"At this convention," he said, "20 of the delegates—communists—are officials of steel company unions."

UNIVERSAL LANGUAGE INTERESTS ROTARIANS

Convention Hears Explanation of Tongue Without Twisters.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., June 25.—(AP)—Interest in a new "universal language" being constructed by the International Auxiliary Language Association for use throughout the world was expressed by Rotary International at its 27th annual convention today.

The Montclair (N. J.) Rotary unit sought to have the 10,000 delegates "endorse" the new language in the 30 nations having clubs, but the resolution was voted down to an expression of "interest" before it was offered for vote.

Dr. Walter D. Head, of Montclair, a leader of the new language movement, explained it had been in the process of construction for 10 years and that a preliminary offering of the new tongue would be submitted to the public about three years hence.

He said the new language would not contain the English sound of "th" which the French cannot handle, or the French "u" which rolls off English tongues in garbled fashion.

The "German" "u" so often fumbled by Americans, would not be represented in the new tongue, nor would many English utterances with which orientals cannot cope.

As a concession to the telephone and radio, the missing sound of the letter "s" would be dropped. Dr. Head quoted telephone engineers as saying the sound of "s" is never heard over a telephone—that "the listener's own mind fills in the gap, unconsciously."

Head, who is chairman of Rotary International's vocational committee, expressed hope the organization would take the lead in spreading the new tongue.

He said Dave H. Morris, American ambassador to Belgium, and his wife, were financing the research, which includes a study of the economic and psychological aspects of the various peoples, as well as their speech.

HIGHWAY HEADS STUDY SAVANNAH RIVER SPAN

The proposal for a $254,000,000 bridge across the Savannah river between Lincoln, Ga., and McCormick, S. C., was placed before Governor Talmadge and the state highway board yesterday by a delegation of Lincoln county citizens.

According to the plans, the bridge will be financed partly with federal funds. Plans have been drawn and the project approved by federal authorities. When completed, the bridge will open up a new route between Atlanta and Columbia, cutting the present distance by 30 miles.

The Lincoln county delegation included Homer Legg, W. T. Dunaway and L. L. Grove, representatives in the state legislature.

4 Blocs Once Pledged to Al Smith Deprecate Bolt, Are Highly Critical

PHILADELPHIA, June 25.—(AP)—Delegates from the four states which were instructed for Alfred E. Smith in the 1932 democratic convention joined today with other New Dealers in lambasting the New Yorker for his suggestion that the party drop President Roosevelt.

Only a few members of the four delegations to this convention, however, attended the 1932 meeting at Chicago where Roosevelt rolled to the nomination over Smith and a half-dozen other potential contenders.

Although saying they could not speak for those who carried Smith's banner in the convention wars at Chicago, heads of the Connecticut, Massachusetts, Rhode Island and New Jersey delegations were free with their own opinions about Smith and his recent anti-Roosevelt activities.

"We in Rhode Island helped to make Al," said Thomas H. Kennelly, head of the state's delegation, "and now he has walked out on us."

He said Smith's popularity in the state would not result in a major swing away from the New Deal there.

"Certainly no state in the Union was more intense in its enthusiasm and more vociferous in its support of Smith than was New Jersey," said William B. Kelly, chairman of the delegation. But he expressed the opinion that Smith now "is the stooge" of "the Liberty League and the du Pont millionaires."

Francis Smith, Connecticut state chairman, advanced the view that "the change of position made by Mr. Smith has eliminated his influence in Connecticut."

In the Massachusetts delegation, Leo M. Harlow, chairman of the state's pre-primary convention, said the Smith blast would not draw many Bay State democrats from the Roosevelt banner.

"There will be a few zealots who will bolt the party," he said, "but the vast majority will stay with Roosevelt."

NANKING APPEALS TO CANTON REGIME

Chiang Kai-shek Seeks Peaceful Settlement of Dispute.

NANKING, China, June 24.—(AP)—The Nanking (central) government made tonight what was interpreted as a final appeal for peace with the bellicose southwest Canton regime.

Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, virtual dictator of the central government, reiterated an appeal for peaceful settlement of the dispute.

Forces of the national government, he asserted, would not cross the frontiers of Kwangtung and Kwangsi provinces (which make up the Canton government) but he added significantly:

"Military discipline must be maintained."

Nanking has large troop concentrations in Hunan province, bordering upon Kwangtung. Nanking military officials denied reports of a clash in Hunan but said Kwangsi soldiers were entrenched in the vicinity of Lingling, Hunan province.

Canton dispatches quoted southwest leaders also as denying reports of a clash in Hunan.

SEINING, DYNAMITING RESULTS IN ARRESTS

Craver expressed appreciation to sportsmen who showed interest in better fishing to the extent of notifying

EXPORT BASIS HOPES FOR WHEAT RECEDING

Drouth Continues Without Let-up Over Central, Midwest Areas.

CHICAGO, June 25.—(AP)—Drouth unabated in the stricken spring wheat belt, has virtually cut down whatever hopes America held of returning to an export basis for the grain this year, leading trade statisticians asserted today.

While a sprinkle—barely a dust settler—fell in scattered parts of the arid territory, crop authorities here agreed there was little likelihood now of realization of the forecast several months ago by Secretary of Agriculture Henry Wallace that Judy might see this country back in its historic role of wheat exporter.

"Our chance is gone," commented E. W. Snow, former assistant secretary of agriculture, and Nat C. Murray, widely known private crop forecaster, nodded general agreement.

Snow pointed out that his latest estimate figure a spring wheat crop of only 150,000,000 bushels, which, with winter wheat expectations of 500,000,000 bushels, would just about meet domestic requirements.

Temperatures above the 100-degree mark continued in sun-blistered Dakotas. The unofficial high of 110 degrees reached yesterday at two North Dakota points was equaled today at Mitchell, S. D., and other high marks included: Pierre, 106; Watertown, 102; and Huron, 108 degrees.

While skies clouded in northern Illinois and the general forecast for the north central states indicated showers within the next 36 hours, there were none in sight for the Dakotas. Farther west, however, thunder showers were forecast for Montana and Wyoming, sections of which have been badly burned.

BAWSEL TRAGEDY SHIP DOCKS AT NEW YORK

Sea Was Calm, Weather Clear Night of Accident, Says Commander.

NEW YORK, June 25.—(AP)—Mystery surrounding the disappearance of the Captain Lindsay M. Bawel and his three small children was deepened late today with the arrival of the widow and mother of the victims aboard the United States army transport Chateau Thierry.

Mrs. Bawel, overwhelmed by grief, was unable to explain the tragedy to relatives who met her at the army base pier in Brooklyn.

Major Gilmer M. Bell, in command of troops aboard the ship, said the 25-year-old flyer and his three children were lost overboard early Monday morning when the Chateau Thierry was about 8-12 miles northeast of Cape May, Cuba.

Splash Heard.
The only indication that anything was amiss at the time, Major Bell said, was a splash heard on the forward port side of the vessel, returning with approximately 1,200 troops from the front and points en route.

Captain Bawel, who was to have entered the Walter Reed hospital in Washington for observation and treatment, boarded the transport with his family at Panama.

His widow did not learn of her bereavement until she arose Monday morning and tried to find her children, whom she had tucked in bed the night before.

Major Bell declared there was nothing to indicate what had happened during the night, with the exception of the splash and a "grunt" heard by a sentry and a woman passenger. The ship backed over the course for six or seven miles, playing a 30-million candlepower searchlight on the waters, he said, but no bodies were found.

Night Calm, Clear.
Previous reports that the children had been washed overboard during a tropical hurricane and their father drowned in an effort to save them were contradicted by Major Bell's version. He said the night was calm and clear.

A board of inquiry composed of a colonel, a medical corps major, and a captain of the line, investigated the occurrence while the ship was steaming toward New York and will report its findings to the War Department in Washington.

Major Bell's version of the affair follows:
"At about 3:35 o'clock on the morning of June 27, at a position approximately 8-12 miles northeast of Cape May, Cuba, a sentry on the after well deck was being relieved by another sentry when he thought he heard a splash and, as he expressed it, a grunt alongside the ship on the port side.

"He immediately went aft to the poop deck, telephoned the bridge, gave the man the overboard signal, and threw over two ring buoys, one of which had a flare attached to it, and then reported in person to the bridge.

"The weather was almost dead calm. It was a dark night, but the visibility was good because there was no haze nor rain.

Retraced Course.
"The ship was put about and put back on its course. We knew definitely that we followed the same course because it was easy to sight the Cape May light. A 30,000,000 candlepower searchlight was playing on the water as the ship was steamed back for about six or seven miles.

"Captain B. E. Topping had turned about in one minute, he having reached the bridge within 27 seconds after the alarm was given.

"After retracing our course for six or seven miles the ship was turned back on its course again.

"Nothing was found.

"Meanwhile one of the ladies who had been sitting on the deck—it was a hot night—was questioned. She said she thought she had heard a splash and a grunt. I went forward and questioned the men on duty there. They had heard nothing.

"The third officer, Mr. Leopold Duchowski, was on the port wing of the bridge taking observations on Cape May. He had heard nothing out of the ordinary.

Search on Supposition.
"In other words the search at that time was being made on a supposition—a very vague supposition. In fact it was thought that the splash may have been made by the dumping of trash.

"The ship finally resumed its course.

"In the morning, a little before 7, Mrs. Bawel asked the chief steward, Tony Lang, if he had seen Lieutenant Bawel. (His captancy was a temporary rank). She thought he had seen the children on the deck and she wanted to wash them for breakfast.

"The chief steward came to me, after making a search of his own. I immediately started a search.

Railroad Sold for $20; $15 Lost in Transaction

ASHEVILLE, N. C., June 25.—(AP)—A railroad was sold here for $20, but the seller lost only $15 in the transaction. He had the privilege of using the road three months.

S. M. Connor, business manager of the city schools, needed a "dinky" railroad to move dirt from an athletic field. A "dinky" railroad is a small one used in mines and lumber camps and the like.

Shopping in railroad circles, Connor picked up a nifty one for $35. His hauling over, he decided to sever his railroad connections.

Along came W. S. Harrison, dealer in junk, with a banking for a "dinky." And in the twinkling of an eye the railroad was sold without benefit of L. C. C.

COLORADO WELCOMES GOV. LANDON, FAMILY

Republican Presidential Nominee To 'Rest and Catch Trout.'

ESTES PARK, Colo., June 25.—(AP)—One thousand Colorado horseback welcomed Governor Alf M. Landon to Estes Park where the republican presidential nominee plans to "rest and catch trout" for the next 10 days.

"A tremendous sight" said the Kansas Governor as his automobile topped a small mountain and he looked down into the hollow of Estes Park, jammed with cheering men, women and children, each astride a trail horse.

At the van of the throng was Mayor C. N. Rockwell, of Estes Park, who accompanied the Governor through the village and then to the secluded McGraw ranch, seven miles north, which the Landon has leased for the summer.

Landon told the crowd he was "in a big rush" to fish a Colorado trout stream. At the ranch in his second press conference of the day Landon shunned politics and insisted he was in Colorado "to rest."

The Governor's motor car, in which he made the trip from Denver, headed the official party into Estes Park.

Mr. Landon and the two smaller Landon children, Nancy Jo, 4, and John Cobb, 2, were alone in a second car and Peggy Anne, the 10-year-old daughter, traveled in a third machine to the ranch.

At Longmont, north of Denver, the party, with about 80 cars carrying an official and unofficial welcoming committee, waited for the Governor.

A huge sign said: "Welcome, Landon." There was a pink elephant, made of cardboard, standing beside the street at the point where Landon stopped and told the crowd he was "glad to be in Colorado."

Colorado's governor, D. C. Johnson, a democrat wearing miniature metal donkey in his lapel, was one of the first to greet Landon when he arrived in Denver.

ALLEGED 'LEGGER' CAPTURED AGAIN
Twice Within Week Officers Have Caught Liqueur Load and Moore.

Charles B. Moore, 26-year-old alleged bootlegger, made it two in a row when he was caught by DeKalb county officers about 5 o'clock yesterday morning on the main highway near the Fulton-DeKalb county line.

The capture was made by Captain J. T. Dickey and Officer R. H. Curtis, who said the chase from Conley to the county line at times reached a speed of between 80 and 90 miles an hour.

Moore was transporting 200 gallons of whiskey in his car, according to the officers, and was placed under $500 bond.

H. M. Moore, 19, brother of the alleged bootlegger, was riding in the car at the time of the chase and was placed under $100 bond for violation of the state prohibition law. Both men made bond.

Two captures within a week's time was the record set up by Moore yesterday, with the previous seizure recorded last Friday, when he was run down by DeKalb Officers C. M. Clifton and Hubert Day at almost the same spot on the highway carrying the same amount of liquor and having members of his family with him at the time.

His wife and baby, accompanying him on the previous trip, were released by the officers.

LINT FABRIC MATS SOUGHT BY STATES
Material Will Be Used in the Construction of Highways.

WASHINGTON, June 25.—(AP)—The Farm Administration announced today that 32 states have requested cotton fabric and mats for use in highway construction tests.

Requests for approximately 6,167,000 square yards of cotton fabric for use as a reinforcement in bituminous surface-treated highways—a new experiment in highway building—were filed by 24 of the 32 states. Estimates for the cost of the material to be used in the construction of more than 575 miles of road. Preliminary tests have indicated such construction lengthens the life of roads.

Twenty-three of the 32 states filed requests for more than 80,500 cotton mats for use in curing concrete highways.

'King Steps Out' Starts Third Week at Rialto

"The King Steps Out," with Grace Moore, latest smash hit Columbia hit to bring capacity audiences to the Rialto every afternoon and night, today enters the third week of its premiere run at that theater. With no sign of diminishing crowds or lessening enthusiasm.

With Franchot Tone providing a handsome and brilliant leading man, Miss Moore mounts to new heights in popularity as a singer, a beauty and a comedienne in this film. It is a romantic story of the old days of gaiety in Vienna before the World War, when the young Austrian king was unmarried and when two princess cousins were much interested in his matrimonial future, one because she loved him and one because she was an officer of the royal guard instead.

Prominent in a supporting cast that is excellent from one end of the length list to the other are Herman Bing, Walter Connolly, Elizabeth Risdon, Victor Jory and many others. It is a Von Sternberg directed film, bearing the master touch of genius in every scene and through every sequence, big and little.

Manager W. T. Murray, with a group of excellent short subjects as added value, is giving local lovers of real entertainment one of the outstanding treats of the season with "The King Steps Out."

'Call of the Prairie' Coming to the Capitol
In continuing their policy of presenting a variety program every week, the Capitol theater will offer a new program both on the stage and screen starting Sunday. The new feature picture will be "The Call of the Prairie," an exciting and romantic story of the Old West. This is another of the famous "arcade" stories of the "Hopalong Cassidy" series and again offers William Boyd in the role of "Hopalong Cassidy." Supporting Boyd are Jimmy Ellison, George Hayes, Muriel Evans, Chester Conklin and Hank Mann.

On the stage is a brand-new revue, "Ring Carleton Blondes," with a cast of 25 stage stars offering eight acts of vaudeville. This show promises to be one of the outstanding units to play the Capitol this season.

The current feature picture is "My Marriage," with beautiful Claire Trevor in the leading role. Supporting Miss Trevor are Kent Taylor, Pauline Frederick, Paul Kelly and Helen Wood.

The present stage show is "Broadway Rhythm," a gay and tuneful revue which features the Rhythm Kings, a 15-piece stage band.

Tonight at 9 o'clock the Capitol will present the regular weekly amateur contest in which a selected amateur will compete for the three prizes offered by the management. If you have never attended one of these contests you have been missing the fun night of the week.

Fields Stars in 'Poppy' At Paramount Today
All the glitter, all the color and noise and fun of a dozen circuses with the addition of the greatest one-man circus on the American screen are rolled into a single production in "Poppy" starring W. C. Fields, which comes to the Paramount theater today. "Poppy" marks the return of Fields to the movies after a critical illness of more than eight months.

The story is one in which Fields set America roaring years ago on the stage. "Poppy" is a carnival story, which means that Fields glories in it as a thing which is his natural element. It is set in 1883, which means that Fields walks and talks in the garb of the period he likes best to interpret. It casts him as a loveable rogue whose pompous fakery clears the way for the romance of a pair of youngsters which means Fields is in character.

The story opens with Fields as the guardian of an 18-year-old girl, Rochelle Hudson, who has spent her entire life moving from one carnival to another with him. Rochelle falls in love with Richard Cromwell, son of the mayor of the small town in which the "greatest show on earth" is playing. Meanwhile Fields hears of a fortune lying idle in the village, awaiting the appearance of its longest-lost heir. He plans to palm off Rochelle as the missing girl. He succeeds but she has no sooner taken possession than his fakery is revealed. A plot twist brings the happy ending with Rochelle settled in the town and Fields hitting the road in search of new and greater carnivals. The supporting cast includes such featured players as Lynne Overman, Catharine Doucet, Rosalind Keith and others.

Wells 'Things to Come' At Loew's Grand Today

When H. G. Wells, one of the greatest of contemporary novelists, turned his attention to film, and undertook to convert his famous novel, "The Shape of Things to Come," into a scenario, with the brilliant aid of the film producer, Alexander Korda, a notable entertainment was inevitable; but even the most optimistic must be impressed by the spectacular and compelling drama presented as "Things to Come," which starts today at Loew's Grand theater. A group of distinguished English actors appear in important roles in this film, with thousands of extras, and gigantic and imaginative sets, to add splendor to the production.

"Things to Come" opens in the year 1940, presenting an anonymous place called Everytown, and closely resembling London. We are on the eve of the next world war. The town is destroyed by a surprise attack by thousands of bombers, in scenes of great realism. This war, as Mr. Wells describes it, lasts for decades, and eventually annihilates civilization as we know it. A period of primitive living ensues, under the rule of a self-appointed "boss"—a crude ruffian, notably well played by Ralph Richardson.

Into this chaos come a group of progressive scientists, calling themselves "wings over the world." They know it. A period of primitive living ensues, under the rule of a self-appointed "boss"—a crude ruffian, notably well played by Ralph Richardson.

"Things to Come" ranks with the most dramatic productions of the season.

'A Connecticut Yankee,' Rogers Re-Run, at Fox
In days of old, when knights were bold—and told dreadful tales—was when the action of "A Connecticut Yankee," starring Will Rogers and coming to the Fox theater, takes place.

Brought back in response to the requests of millions of Will Rogers fans who considered it his greatest picture, "A Connecticut Yankee" is a droll, fanciful story, full of riotous comedy and adventure.

The plot of the story begins when Rogers goes back to the days of King Arthur in a dream. Just as much surprised by the knights as they are by him, Rogers gets the upper hand while he starts showing a little modern magic.

There are some hilarious episodes as Rogers conquers villainous opponents, installs bathtub in merry England. But the punch of the picture is reserved for the close when Rogers rides off to save a damsel fair from the clutches of Queen Morgan Le Fay, played by Myrna Loy.

Directed by Clarence Brown, the picture which features Maureen O'Sullivan, William Farnum and Frank Albertson in the principal supporting roles.

TWO MEN ARE KILLED WHEN AUTO HITS CURB
CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., June 25.—(AP)—James Edward Ashford, 30, Chattanooga electrician, and Kenneth Duncan, about 25, of Birmingham, were killed early today when their light roadster crashed into a curb and overturned.

Ralph Davis, 26, who was injured, was quoted by police as saying the three men and a young woman were en route to Georgia for Duncan's marriage. Later, however, the woman identified herself as Mrs. Duncan. She said she would accompany Duncan's body to Birmingham.

Gold Fish Are Edible, Says North Carolinian
HENDERSON, N. C., June 25.—(AP)—Others may sing the gastronomic glories of the tumbling trout, but Will Range twangs his lyre to gold fish.

Two years ago Range said he tossed 18 small gold fish in his pond and forgot them for a time. Now he has gold fish galore. He says he has sold and given away more than a thousand and eaten with relish more than he can remember.

The bite the hook with gusto, he says, and are tops in piscatorial delicacy.

DARDANELLES SESSION HALTED AMID DISPUTE

Russian and Anglo-Jap Factions Split on Straits Issue.

MONTREUX, Switzerland, June 25.—(AP)—The Dardanelles conference recessed today in the midst of a critical clash between soviet Russia on the one hand and Great Britain and Japan on the other.

Russia's demand for complete freedom of passage through the straits for her warships was the issue.

The international parley, called to consider Turkey's request she be allowed to rejoin the League of Nations, recessed to rejoin the Dardanelles, but a chance to retackle the Italo-Ethiopian dispute.

The fate of the Montreux conference may depend upon how the League handles Italy. If Premier Mussolini is angered anew, he may continue to boycott the sessions here.

Turkey let it be known that because of the disturbed state of Europe, she wants to build a fortress and place big guns in the Dardanelles as soon as the Montreux convention is signed, without waiting for its ratification.

Japan, however, insisted the convention cannot be operative until it is ratified by all. Discussion was postponed.

Russia desires freedom of passage, Foreign Minister Maxim Litvinoff explained, to enable her warships to link the soviet's naval bases in various seas.

"The demand of Black sea countries for the greater security of their shores does not injure the interests of other states who are given freedom of passage within reasonable limits for all peaceful purposes."

Great Britain and Japan demanded that the Dardanelles be kept open for eastward-bound warships, just as Russia demands such passage for westward-bound vessels. France, allied with Russia by their pact of mutual assistance, sided with Moscow.

Italy's absence from the deliberations was a further complication. Technical committees will work while the delegates are attending sessions of the League.

VENEZUELAN WORKERS INJURED AT MEETING
MARACAIBO, Venezuela, June 25.—(UP)—Four were killed and 12 wounded last night when government agents broke up a workers' mass meeting at the Mene Grande oil field of the Caribbean Petroleum Company, it was learned belatedly tonight.

The government men fired on the meeting when orders to disperse were disregarded by the crowd. It was the first instance of enforcement of the recently enacted public order bill whose provisions caused several general strikes and labor agitation while it was being considered in congress.

MRS. ZIMBALIST CLEARED
WINSTED, Conn., June 25.—(AP)—Coroner Lester W. Schaefer, in a finding issued today, exonerated Mrs. Alma Gluck Zimbalist from all criminal responsibility in connection with the automobile death of Minnie Pianti, 13-year-old Torrington girl, last Friday.

Miss Holman Weds William Fred Scott, Of Thomasville

HARTFORD, Ala., June 25.—The marriage of Miss Elva Theresa Holman and William Fred Scott, of Thomasville, Ga., was solemnized here yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the Methodist church. The bride was John Tom, Milton and Herbert Holman and Horace Chaney, the bride's nephews.

The bride was given in marriage by her father, John Clinton Holman. The groom was attended by his brother, Hudson Scott, of Opelika, Ala. Rev. J. R. Haskins performed the rites.

Mr. Scott and his bride left after the ceremony for a trip to the Pacific coast. After July 15 they will be at home in Thomasville.

The bride is a member of prominent business and social circles. She is a graduate of Sullivan College in Roanoke, Va. Mr. Scott is the son of Mr. and Mrs. A. Scott, of Atlanta.

Culbertson on Contract

By ELY CULBERTSON, World's Champion Player and Greatest Card Analyst.

THE ETERNAL QUESTION.

Perhaps the most difficult thing in bridge to learn and to teach is when and when not to lead trumps! General rules are easy to lay down, but may be valuable for a reasonable percentage of hands, but countless situations arise in which only specific analysis can avail.

Today's hand offers a striking illustration of two distinct methods of handling: the one actually used by the declarer which resulted in a two trick penalty, and the correct line, in which the declarer would have made a contract.

North's immediate club raise was wrong, the adverse part-score not to the contrary. He should have passed. North opened the club king, dummy followed and declarer led the four spot, leading the 10 of hearts. North and dummy played low and South, to lure declarer into a false sense of security, won with the ace, returning a low club. Declarer discarded a spade, won in dummy with the ace, and led the spade queen. South covered and West won with the ace. Another heart won was led up to dummy's queen and to declarer's disgust, North failed to follow suit. South, won with the jack and cashed the king, reducing declarer and dummy to one trump each. A third round of clubs took the last trump from declarer. Dummy's jack of spades now was cashed, followed by the king and 10 of diamonds. When South failed to follow, West collected the ace and took more tricks except dummy's trump, since he never could re-enter his own hand. Passing the second diamond would have saved the trick, inasmuch as North had no club to return.

Now consider how easy it would have been to make the contract. The first club should have been won in dummy with the ace, declarer discarding a diamond. There was no need to draw trumps, because neither dummy nor declarer had any long suit to protect. It was, however, vital to attack the spade finesse as soon as possible. Therefore, the second play should have been the queen of spades. South would cover and declarer would win with the ace, returning a spade to dummy's jack. Now a club should be led and ruffed by declarer, after which the third round of spades would be ruffed in dummy. Another club ruff would give declarer entry for the lead of the fourth and good spade, dummy discarding a diamond.

Whether or not South ruffed this trick with the jack and led the ace and king of trumps, there would be no way to defeat the contract. No more than two of dummy's trumps could be drawn, which still would leave one for the all-important third round ruff of diamonds.

If South failed to ruff the good spade, choosing to discard a diamond, a low diamond should be led to the king. Again it would not matter whether or not South ruffed, as the defenders never could make more than the three top trumps.

European Travel Lures Atlanta Families To Sail on Ocean Liners

By Sally Forth.

IT SEEMS quite the vogue at present for whole families to take off for Europe at the same time. Not that they always take the same boat, even if they are sailing on the same day, for family tastes are prone to differ as to what countries are preferable to visit on the continent.

An interesting family group leaving for New York on Sunday will include Mr. and Mrs. Robert B. Wilby and their lovely sub-deb daughter, Alma. Mr. and Mrs. Wilby plan to sail on the S. S. Bremen on Tuesday for a month's stay in England and France. Alma will be a passenger on the palatial Normandie sailing on the same day for a North Cape cruise.

Alma, it seems, has a decided taste for European travel. She spent all last summer touring the capitals and art centers on the continent. For the next two months she will cruise in northern waters, visiting Norway, Sweden, Russia and eventually Germany, where she will be an interested spectator at the Olympic games. And Sally hears that for next year she has her heart set on a round-the-world cruise.

Which means that Atlanta apparently is not going to see very much of Alma for some time to come. In the fall she will return to Duke University, where she was enrolled during the past winter and was ranked as one of the school's most popular students.

Landing at Cherbourg, Mr. and Mrs. Wilby will go straight to Paris for a week's stay. Their next objective will be London, after which they plan a tour of England's beautiful lake country. They will return to Atlanta to be ensconced in their handsome new Tudor road home around the first of August.

ANOTHER attractive family group leaving for New York on Sunday includes J. J. Haverty, his son and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Haverty, and his daughter, Miss May Haverty. This congenial foursome will also sail on Tuesday on the Bremen for a tour of England and France. Accompanying them to New York will be Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Haverty's charming young daughter, Clara, who will be a passenger on the S. S. Kungsholm when it weighs anchor on Tuesday bound for a North Cape cruise. Clara will join her close friend, Laura Maddox, and Laura's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Maddox, for the trip, which will not return them to New York until September 1.

Among the passengers sailing from New York tomorrow on the Aquitania will be Dr. and Mrs. Lon Grove, another son and daughter of J. J. Haverty. Landing at Southampton, they will go first to historic old Edinburgh, Scotland, after which they will tour the English lake region.

On July 1 they plan to join their father and his party in London for two days. Later they will go to France for a delightful motor trip through the chateau country, where Dr. Grove doubtless will visit many familiar scenes. For it was in this section that he saw distinguished military service with the A. E. F. during the World War.

Having left Atlanta yesterday, Dr. and Mrs. Grove will join their intimate friends, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lanier, of America, in New York today. The attractive quartet has planned a gay time in the metropolis before setting sail for foreign shores. Mr. and Mrs. Lanier will leave on Saturday for a trip to Bermuda.

THE luncheon planned for tomorrow at the Atlanta Athletic Club by Mrs. Clyde King Jr. will be in the nature of a "hall and farewell" affair for two charming matrons. One will travel for the sheer enjoyment of the trip, while the other will answer the call of duty. They are Mrs. George Woodruff and Mrs. William Saffarans.

The former, who was Irene King, arrived yesterday from her home in Daytona Beach to visit her mother, Mrs. Clyde King Sr., on Ponce de Leon avenue. On Monday, with Mr. King and their daughters, Irene, Mary Frances and Jane, she will leave for an extensive tour of the west, which will occupy the better part of the remaining summer season.

Mrs. Saffarans, of Fort Sam Houston, Texas, was before her marriage Douglas Paine, and with her small daughter and namesake is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas P. Payne, at their Peachtree Battle avenue residence. At present Captain Saffarans is at Camp Perry, Ohio, but at an early date he will join his family and they will sail for Hawaii, where the captain will be on duty for the next two years.

Frances Poole King is noted for her beautiful parties and tomorrow's affair will be no exception. Her guests will be Mesdames Robert Woodruff, Clyde King, William Saffarans, Harry W. Ingham, Boling Jones Jr., Albert Pritchard, Troy Bivings Jr., Forrest M. Barfield, Robert W. Woodruff, of Wilmington, Del.; Eugene Haynes, Lawrence Willet and Misses Patricia Poole and Irene Woodruff.

IF A MAN bites a dog, it's always news, and when a bridegroom cuts a bachelor button from his wedding cake, it's certainly the same sort of news! That's what Bob Horton did at the reception following his brilliant wedding to Beverly Rogers on Wednesday.

Sally wonders if the other symbols in the cake are going to be as contrary as that one was! Catherine Gray cut the four-leaf clover and Eloise Gresham the wishbone. Sally hopes they are going to run true to form and that the young belles have the

Miss Frances Oglesby Weds H. L. Hills At Church Ceremony

The marriage of Miss Frances Oglesby and Henry Lyman Hills was solemnized yesterday afternoon at 5:30 o'clock at the Central Presbyterian church with the bride's father, Dr. Stuart R. Oglesby, performing the ceremony. Mrs. Morelle Horton Young played the musical program.

The altar was banked with palms and greenery augmented with baskets filled with Shasta daisies. Casting a glow over the scene were lighted white tapers placed in cathedral candelabra flanking each side of the altar. Ushers were O. J. Parker Jr., John D. Banaley Jr., G. B. Strickler, Harry Carlisle, Douglas Rumble Jr. and J. Gordon Moore Jr.

Mrs. O. K. Parker Jr. was matron of honor; Misses Louise Oglesby, of Lewisville, Ark., cousin of the bride; Douschka Sweets, of Louisville, Ky.; Johnnie Mae York and Margaret Ellis were bridesmaids, and the junior bridesmaid was Miss Anne Eagon.

The bride's attendants were gowned alike in floor-length models of green starched chiffon made with high necklines in front, ending in a deep V in the back. The short, puffed sleeves reached to the elbow, and the long skirts flared into graceful fullness. Their green horsehair braid hats were trimmed with Shasta daisies, and they carried bouquets of Shasta daisies tied with green ribbon.

The bride entered the church with her brother, Stuart Oglesby III, by whom she was given in marriage. They were met at the altar by the bridegroom and his brother, Richard Hills, who was best man.

The beautiful bride was gowned in white lace posed over white satin. The gown featured long, tight sleeves and a cowl neckline. The long skirt fitted close to her figure to the knees, and flared into fullness. She wore a picture hat of white horsehair braid, the brim being made of lace like the bride's costume, and was trimmed with valley lilies. She carried a bouquet of valley lilies, cascaded with similar flowers, and wore a gold locket containing miniature of her parents.

The bride's mother, Mrs. O. K. Parker, was gowned in light blue lace worn with a pink straw hat and pink accessories, and her shoulder bouquet was of pink roses. Mrs. A. L. Hills, mother of the groom, wore black chiffon and her flowers were gardenias.

After the ceremony, Dr. and Mrs. Oglesby entertained at an informal reception at their in-law circle residence. Misses Elizabeth Alexander and Mary Pritchard presided at the punch bowl. Miss Maude Knapp kept the bride's book.

The bride's table was overlaid with a handsome lace cloth and centered with a three-tiered wedding cake. Antique crystal bowls filled with Shasta daisies and lilies of the valley, and crystal candlesticks holding lighted white tapers added to the exquisite decorations of the table.

Mr. Hills and his bride left for a wedding trip to Florida and Havana, Cuba. Mrs. Hills traveled in a two-piece trip, sheer suit of dark blue with lighter blue accessories. On their return they will occupy their new home at 734 Inverness avenue after July 15.

Out-of-town guests were W. B. Oglesby, of Texarkana, Ark., and Michael Oglesby, of Lewisville, Ark.

Vacation Bible School to Close.

The closing exercises of the Vacation Bible school of Central Presbyterian church will be held this evening at 7:30 o'clock at the church. An interesting program featuring memory work and songs will be presented by the pupils under the direction of J. M. Harvey, assistant pastor.

Gold-plated pins will be awarded to pupils who have completed the required memory work and made a perfect attendance record. Blue ribbons will be presented to pupils for perfect attendance. An offering for the baby clinic milk fund will be taken.

The school has been in session for the past two weeks with an average attendance of 160. It has been operated by the departmental superintendents of the Sunday school with a corps of 25 workers.

The faculty included Mrs. T. A. Clayton, beginners; Mrs. T. C. Dickson, primary; Mrs. J. M. Harvey, juniors; Mrs. W. C. Tennant, sewing; Mrs. Mary Pritchard, painting; J. M. Harvey, general superintendent. Dr. Stuart Oglesby conducted the "story telling," a new and instructive feature of this year's session.

The little garments made in the sewing class and the toys of the handwork department will be given to the babies of the baby clinic. An offering has been taken each day for the baby clinic milk fund. The articles made by the pupils will be on display and the doors of the church will be open at 7 o'clock.

SIMMONS' SATURDAY NIGHT

How a Guileless Cattleman Saw the Sights in Houston.

INSTALLMENT II.

Mr. Simmons was delighted with the performance. He laughed unrestrainedly at the jokes of the comedian, and leaned half out of the box to applaud when the Devere sisters did their song and dance and split specialty. Captain Clancy leaned back in his chair and hardly looked at the stage, but on his face was an expression of large content, and a tranquil smile. Mr. Simmons kept the carpet bag in both hands all this time. Presently, while he was listening with apparent rapture to a topical song by Mlle. Fanchon, the Parisian nightingale, he felt a hand laid on his shoulder. He turned about and beheld a vision that seemed to take away his breath. Two radiant beings in white, with blue ribbons, and showing quite a stretch of black ribbed stockings were in the box. Mr. Simmons hugged his carpet bag to his breast and started up in embarrassed alarm.

"Don't shy, old man," said one of them. "Sit down and buy some beer."

Mr. Simmons seemed so full of blushes and perturbation for a while that he scarcely knew what he was doing, but Captain Clancy seemed so cool and easy, and began to chat so companionably with the ladies the next quarter of an hour found the four seated opposite one another at the little table, and a colored waiter was kept busy bringing bottles of beer from the bar and carrying away empty glasses. Mr. Simmons grew absolutely hilarious. He told funny stories about ranch life, and spoke quite boastfully about the gay times he had had in Kansas City during the three days he was there.

"Oh, you're a bold, bad man," said one of the young ladies called Violet. "If Lillie and Jim-I mean your friend, wasn't in here I'd be real 'fraid of you."

"Go away, now," said Mr. Simmons; "you know I ain't nothin' of that sort. Bring some more beer here, you colored feller!"

The party certainly were enjoying themselves. Presently Violet leaned over the railing and called Mr. Simmons' attention to a lady that was singing on the stage. Mr. Simmons turned his back, and as he did so Captain Clancy quickly drew from his pocket a small vial and poured the contents into the glass of beer on Mr. Simmons' side of the waiter that had just been brought in.

"Here, you all," called the lady addressed as Lillie, "the beer's getting cold." Mr. Simmons and Violet turned back to the table, and Mr. Simmons accidentally stumbled over his carpet bag, which he had actually set down for a moment upon the floor. He fell sprawling across the table, striking the edge of the waiter with his hand and nearly turning Captain Clancy over in his chair, but spilling none of the beer.

"Excuse me," he said, turning very red. "Got my foot caught. I'm as awkward as a cowboy at a dance. Well, here's luck."

Everybody drank the beer, and Lillie began to hum a little song. In about a minute Violet reeled around in her chair and tumbled off on the floor in a confused heap of white muslin, blond hair and black stockings.

Captain Clancy seemed much vexed. He shot a steel blue flash from his eyes at Lillie and said something very much like "d-n it" to himself. "Great heavens!" cried Mr. Simmons, "this lady has fainted. Call a doctor, or get some water or somethin' quick."

"Say," said Lillie, lighting a cigarette, "don't get woody. She'll sleep it off. You gents get out for a while. Say, J. Misters, tell the bartender to send Sam up as you go out. Good night."

"We had better go," said the captain.

Mr. Simmons, with many protestations of sympathy and anxiety, was led away by Captain Clancy down stairs, where he delivered the message, and thence out into the cool night air. He was feeling strongly the effects of the beer he had drunk, and leaned heavily upon the captain's arm. Captain Clancy assured him that the lady would be all right in a little while, that she had merely drunk a little too much beer, which had affected her rather suddenly, and succeeded in restoring Mr. Simmons to his former cheerful spirits.

"It is not yet half past eleven," said the captain. "How would you like to go up into one of the gambling rooms just to finish a game. It is a very interesting sight."

"Just the thing," said Mr. Simmons. "They are not new things to me at all. Twice I have been in 'em in San Antonio. Saw a feller win $18 one night in this game you play with little buttons on little boards."

"Keno, I believe," said the captain. "Yes, that's it—keno."

I shall not undertake to describe the locality of the apartments to which our visitors next went. Gambling houses are almost unknown in Houston, and as this is a true story, the place, both of them being strangers, but by some accidental blunder, Captain Clancy led Mr. Simmons up a brightly lighted and carpeted stair into a large apartment, where a goodly crowd of men were gathered, trying their luck at the different games usually found in a well-appointed gambling house.

The stairway opened into the room nearly at the end farthest from the street. Immediately in front of the two gentlemen when they entered was a room in which were two or three round tables and chairs, at that time unoccupied.

The DEBUNKER

By John Harvey Farley, Ph.D.

The stories that circulate about the bloody nature of battlefields are usually exaggerated. To be sure, that at the Battle of the Marne, during the World War, "the river ran red with blood for three days." Similar references are made to the "bloody" game of "Run" Indian massacre near Detroit, "Bull Run" in Virginia and "Bloody Lane" at Antietam. The truth is, blood congeals so quickly that it could not flow in a river. The report that Godfrey de Bouillon rode through "red blood to the knee" when he captured Jerusalem is also fiction. Military men say there is very little blood to be seen on battlefields.

UNCLE RAY'S CORNER

CAPTAIN VANCOUVER'S TRAVELS.

A Golden Jubilee.

When Captain George Vancouver sailed away from Vancouver Island, he did not know that some day a great city, named in his honor, would grow up in the region he had explored. The city of Vancouver is on the Canadian mainland, but the captain saw the land on which it was built.

Vancouver is one of the world's fast-growing cities. Thirty-five years ago it was the home of only 26,000 persons. Now it has a population well past the quarter-million mark. Not counting suburbs, and it ranks third among Canada's cities. Nature gave it a fine port, which has been improved. Millions of tons of wheat are shipped from the harbor each year and the city also ranks high in export of lumber, flour, apples and other products of western Canada.

A fine program has been planned for those who attend the Golden Jubilee. There are to be pageants, telling the history from the time Captain Vancouver stepped on the shores of Burrard's Inlet. There will be symphonies, band concerts and chorus singing.

Among the sports events there are to be tennis matches and a golf tournament. Lacrosse, games, cricket and baseball are also scheduled. Airplane races are scheduled. One event of the air is to be the "flashing start of a solo assault on the trans-Canada air record."

All in all, Vancouver will celebrate a fine record since it rose from the ashes of a burned village.

R. D. PASCHAL FIRED FROM REVENUE OFFICE

Carreker Dismisses 5-Year Worker; 4 Women Ignore Removal Order.

As the four women employees in the office of Comptroller General Homer C. Parker, recent appointee of Governor Talmadge returned to work yesterday despite the comptroller's demand Wednesday for their resignation, R. D. Paschal, for five years attached to the income tax division of the state revenue commission, was discharged by G. B. Carreker, commission chairman.

Both the comptroller general and Carreker, also a recent appointee of the Governor, refused to issue statement yesterday, although Parker said Wednesday he would not tolerate "pernicious political activity," by which it is understood he meant taking information to William D. Harrison, former comptroller general, who was suspended by Talmadge.

Paschal Well Known. Paschal, an accountant, is widely known in Atlanta as an amateur weather prophet. Carreker, former comptroller general, dismissed several employees of the comptroller general's department. He was appointed comptroller by Talmadge, after the Governor suspended Harrison when the latter refused to sign warrants drawn on the treasury in the absence of a general appropriation bill.

The Governor placed Carreker on the revenue commission when Paul H. Doyal, of the commission, died recently from injuries suffered in an auto wreck.

The four women employees in the department of Parker stated they would "wait to be kicked out" when the comptroller general requested their resignation. It is expected they will be on the job this morning.

Resignation by the women, all veterans workers in the office, was not demanded personally by the comptroller general, but by the heads of departments in which the women work, following the comptroller's orders.

Dismissals are effective July 1, and it is understood salaries of the employees are paid through June 30. What action the comptroller general will take if the women continue to work after July 1 is not known.

The employees are Miss Dulcie Dumas, head of the fuel oil tax division; Mrs. Libbie Duffy, her assistant; Mrs. Pearl Steele, secretary to Dr. S. H. Wilson, state oil chemist; and Miss Martha Kimbell, clerk and bookkeeper in the mileage tax and utility tax division.

LARSEN SPEAKS IN DADE COUNTY

Candidate Addresses Trenton Gathering; Lashes at Weltner Convention.

TRENTON, Ga., June 25.—(AP)—Speaking before a crowd that filled the Dade county courtroom, here this afternoon, Wash Larsen, former United States congressman, and candidate for governor of Georgia in the democratic primary, lashed out at the "Weltner walling wall convention," and the motives back of the organization.

Opening his address with a statement that he was "a part of the national administration and for it 100 per cent before some of his opponents had decided whose coat-tail to ride to the executive office," Larsen declared his platform was woven with support of old-age pensions and the social security program "in its entirety."

He said he was in favor of making old-age pensions a "state obligation right now." He offered a highway platform that promised the reduction of the state gasoline tax and removal of the "road commissioners" who were selected by their ability to construct a "political highway for the governor to enter the capitol." He proposed not less than five road commissioners from as many districts to be elected by the people.

Larsen spoke of his former experience as fitting him for office and referred his listeners to his record of 16 years in congress.

WOMEN GIVEN RIGHT TO SUE FOR FIRE LOSS

The Georgia supreme court ruled yesterday Mrs. Maud D. Parker, of Macon, is entitled to sue the Georgia Power Company on a charge that the concern's negligence caused her damage in a fire last year.

The record shows the Yorkshire Insurance Company, Ltd., of York, England, had insured Mrs. Parker's home for $800. Mrs. Parker charged that her home caught fire last August from a blaze at the residence of Mrs. Gladys Slade. She charged the Slade fire originated from a faulty electric refrigerator which the power company had promised, but failed, to repair.

The insurance company paid her $800, but she claimed her loss was greater than this amount. The power company claimed and the Bibb superior court overruled the demurrer. The supreme court, in a unanimous ruling, upheld the Bibb courts.
